

TEACHERS ARE HERE

SEVENTY-TWO AT INSTITUTE.
One of the Largest Gatherings of the Kind Ever Held in This City.

The summer school for Wood county convened at the Howe high school building on Monday morning and at this writing seventy-two teachers and others who have aspirations along that line are in attendance.

As usual on such occasions the great majority of those in attendance are ladies, there being only three gentlemen as regular scholars, although a number have visited the sessions from time to time.

The conductors are Miss Rosalia Bohrer of the Marathon county training school, Wausau, C. R. Thompson of the Richland county training school, G. O. Banting of the Augusta high school, and Otto J. Len, our county superintendent.

The sessions open every morning at 8:30 o'clock and last until 12, and in the afternoon school opens at 2 and closes at 4 o'clock. All registering are supposed to attend regularly in order to be counted as pupils and receive the benefits of the school.

The conductors report that up to date the sessions have been running along smoothly and all seem to take great interest in the work. Among the new branches that those in attendance are preparing themselves in are Agriculture, American and English literature, English history and English composition. This fall the examination of applicants for certificates will include these branches so that it is very necessary for teachers to prepare themselves accordingly.

The summer schools for teachers are not only becoming more popular every year, but owing to the increased efficiency demanded by school officers, teachers find the work very beneficial in aiding them to improve their standing in branches that may have been more or less difficult for them at former examinations.

Among those in attendance are Lillian Berard, Clara Youskow, Ada Potter, Mollie McGloin, Jennie Berard, Lettie Dickson, Katie Harmon, Clara Johnson, Elizabeth Rowland, Edith Heiser, Etta Heiser, Alf. Berard, Cleave Akey, Jennie Kaath, Eva Nisson, Nellie Ward, Jessie Smith, Ida Halvorsen, Belle Harding, Laura Lemley, Susie Granger, Emma Johnson, H. A. Pables, Isabel Akey, Amelia Weisenborn, Almira Blain, Minnie Sullivan, Hanna Rasmussen, Nellie Vincent, Marie LaBrot, Ella Dahlke, Fern Miller, Clara Duocan, Anna Gotschal, Luella Taylor, Edith Gotschal, Edna Kruger, Anna Johnson, Lucy Wood, Louise Brown, Mary Bever, Lizzie McCandley and Theresa Byrnes, Grand Rapids; Gyneth Lee and Adelaide Fastman, Marshfield; Maud Burroughs, Pansy Short, Erna Miller, Nekoosa; Louisa Sweet, New Rome; Beatrice Ratelle, Rose Ratelle, Celia Vadnaia, Josie Johnson, Anna Johnson, Rudolph; Mary Krites, Laura Potter, Clyde Long, Stella Potter, Cassie Raymond, Nona Udell, Mabel Udell, Kate McKeown, Pittsville; Pearl Osgood, Dexterville; Rose Mohan, Auburndale; Bell Young, Stevens Point; Martha Hinz, Mabel White, Vesper, Nellie Victory, Rodney Grace Daniels, Mayne Malloy, Babcock.

Death of John Albee.

John Albee, one of the oldest settlers of the town of Rudolph, died on Friday of last week from the effects of a paralytic stroke, which he suffered last September.

Mr. Albee was 72 years of age, having been born on the 16th day of January, 1830, at Windsor in the state of Maine. While he had been comparatively helpless since last September, he was enjoying his usual health up to within a few minutes of his death. His wife had just put him to bed that night, about nine o'clock, and a few minutes afterward he was dead.

Mr. Albee came to Wood county in 1856, and being an engineer and millwright he assisted in building and afterward in operating the Clark & Scott mill in Rudolph. He has also worked in other mill in this vicinity since that time, and always led an active and industrious life. He was widely known all about this section, especially to the old settlers.

He is survived by his wife, who resides in the town of Rudolph, and a stepson, W. A. Johnson, of this city. He has also a sister and brother living in Maine, they being Mrs. Ellen Perkins and Benjamin Albee.

The funeral was held on Monday from the Episcopal church in this city and a large concourse of people followed the remains to their last resting place.

STOOD THE TEST.

Waterworks Nearly Ready for General Use.

On Saturday the standpipe was filled with water and everything up in that neighborhood was found to be in first class shape. When the standpipe was full the pressure down town was found to be about 90 pounds to the square inch, which is sufficient for all practical purposes.

The pressure in the mains was also run up to 150 pounds to the square inch in order to give the final test as to strength, this being the pressure which the pipes are supposed to stand if necessary.

The system is now about completed, but Engineer Pfeiffer states that it has not been accepted, and will not be until some improvements are made in the system, in the way of stopping leaks that exist at different places. The pipe across the river is defective in this respect, the leakage being greater than is allowable in a stretch of that length.

On Monday afternoon the standpipe was emptied again and a six-inch stream was run into the river for an hour or more before the water was exhausted. As a six-inch stream is equal in volume to thirty-six one-inch streams, it is evident that the standpipe would supply an ordinary five stream for thirty-six hours, even if no water were pumped in during the interval.

Those of the west side who do not like river water as a steady beverage are anxiously waiting for the time when spring water will be supplied to the entire city.

Hunters' Licenses.

This week County Clerk Kenne received his 1902 stock of hunters' licenses from the state, and he is now prepared to fit out our local sportsmen with all the necessary credentials to prevent them from falling into the hands of the game wardens.

The license differs this year from what it was in the past. It is a long and narrow document with the coupons on the end, perforated so as to be easily detachable. The two end coupons are fitted with eyelets like a shipping tag, which makes them more durable when attached to the carcass of a deer, and the entire document is printed on a manilla tag board, making it very tough.

On the back of the license is printed the gist of the game law, which is as follows:

Deer must not be hunted in either of the counties of Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Manitowoc or Calumet at any time.

Deer can only be hunted during the last ten days of November in the counties of Sauk, Adams, Columbia, Richland and Marquette.

Except as above mentioned deer may be hunted in Wisconsin during the last twenty days of November.

Rabbits and squirrels from July 1 to following May 1.

Wild duck, brant, or any aquatic fowl and snipe from September 1 to January 1.

Woodcock, partridge, pheasant, prairie hen, grouse of any variety or plover from September 1 to December 1.

Must Not Be Hunted or Molested.

Swan, Mongolian, Chinese or English pheasant, or quail of any variety. Any Carrier or Homing pigeon. Any harmless bird or the nest or egg of any harmless bird or waterfowl.

Assessment Matters.

Attorney J. W. Cochran, supervisor of assessments, was called to meet with the board of review in the town of Kennington on Monday of last week and on Tuesday he met with the town board of review of the town of Port Edwards and the village board of the recently organized village of Port Edwards. Week before last he met with the town boards of the towns of Arpin and Lincoln and was also engaged in correcting errors in manner of making up assessment roll of the town of Milladore.

He reports a general good disposition on the part of assessors and boards of review to do their duty and to follow the rules of law governing their procedure as such officers.

The main difficulty that he encounters is the old practice, which, while wholly unwarranted in the law, has almost universally prevailed before boards of review, of listening to complaints and arguments and acting thereon without any evidence being produced to warrant a change in the figures made by the assessor, and also the custom on the part of the clerks of keeping no record of the proceedings except such as could be gathered from an inspection of erasures and interlinations made in the assessment roll.

The law requires the clerk to keep full minutes of the proceedings of the board of review and file the same in his office, taking down the name of every person who was sworn and the substance of his testimony and any question he may refuse to answer, and requires the board to disregard every statement that is not sworn to, and prohibits them from raising or lowering any figures made by the assessor except upon competent testimony taken before them.

When once started on the right course in this respect, the boards of review find it very easy to follow the law and much easier to perform their duty than it is to listen to unsworn statements, paid arguments and unfounded complaints.

Special Train to Merrill.—July 7, 1902, account Saginaw, on July 25th (M. & St. P. R. Co.) will run a special train to Merrill, leaving Nekoosa 7:20 a. m., Fort Ed. 7:35 a. m., Grand Rapids at 8 a. m., Beach Merrill at 8:45 a. m., returning leave Merrill at 5:30 p. m. One fare for the round trip.

HEATING CONTRACT

SECURED BY B. F. STURTEVANT

Our High School will Have a Model System.—Other Items of Interest.

The bids for heating apparatus for the new high school were opened on Thursday evening by the building committee and it was found that there were six bids for the work, ranging in price from $9,225 to $8,335, the lowest being that of the B. F. Sturtevant company of Boston, Mass., for $9,225.

The other bidders were the W. A. Bowers Heating company, $7,430; Archamb Heating and Plumbing company, $7,565; Depond-Hasey company, $7,190; George M. Dixon company, $8,335, and the National Blower Works, $6,960.

While the Sturtevant company's bid was $9,225, the extras desired by the commissioners brought the price up to $7,010, and they feel that they have contracted for as complete and up-to-date a heating system as it is possible to install in a building today.

The heating will be done by a hot blast system, the hot air being produced by coming in contact with steam coils and then forced throughout the building by the use of fans.

There will be two 60-inch tubular boilers, 16 feet long, which will furnish the steam for driving the engine and heating the coils. These boilers will be built by the Freeman company of Racine and will possess a tensile strength of 60,000 pounds to the square inch.

These boilers will furnish steam for the engine that drives the fans as well as steam to heat the coils, and the engine will be of the high grade dynamo type, fitted with two fly wheels which can be used as drive wheels, one for revolving the fans and the other to run a dynamo if it is found desirable. The fan will be 9 feet in diameter and will be driven by belt.

A brick air shaft is being constructed which will draw the air to be used in the building about 12 feet from the ground. The air then goes over a set of tempering coils situated near the foundation of the building. This raises the temperature to about 60 degrees, and as it passes on it goes through the hot air coils which raises it to the required temperature to heat the building. The heating and tempering coils contain about 14,000 feet of tubing.

Each of the rooms will be furnished with a thermostat which, it is claimed, will regulate the heat to a degree by opening and closing the dampers automatically when the temperature varies. The furnaces will be of a type that will burn both wood and coal. The apparatus for controlling the heat is known as the Johnson-Service Heat regulating device and is covered by a guarantee to do the work claimed for it.

Besides this five of the rooms will be furnished with direct radiation in the shape of steam coils, which can be used to heat these rooms at times when the engine is not running which is another very desirable feature of the plant.

Change in Division.—The Wausau Herald is authority for the statement that the division point of the St. Paul road is soon to be moved from Babcock to Wausau. It says in part: "It has long been known that officials of the road were not satisfied with Babcock but there were many difficulties and objections to moving to be overcome. These have gradually been surmounted and now it seems a plan has been perfected for making the change. Next Sunday a new time card will be issued for the Wisconsin Valley division and this will provide for the removal of head quarters for four train crews from Babcock to Wausau. These trains are all way freights and two will start out of Wausau north and two south each day, giving this city a much better freight service than ever before."

Snaring the Ungodly.—Wausau ministers of the gospel have hit upon the plan of holding their sessions out of doors during the hot weather. They will use the lawn about the court house for the congregation and preach from the band stand. This scheme should fill a long felt want with the man who cannot stand to sit out a sermon inside a stuffy church during the heated season and who is kept from divine services the remainder of the year on account of the extreme cold.

New Postal Card.—A new one-cent postal card is now being printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington and when the first issue of four million has been counted and bundled the new cards will be placed on sale. Its distinctive feature will be a vignette of President McKinley in the place of that of President Jefferson. The issue of the old style card is to be discontinued when the stock is sold. There is also a change in the manner of placing the lettering on the face of the card, leaving a wider blank margin at the top for the postmark.

Want New Depot.—The people of Marshfield have petitioned the Northwestern road to build a new depot at that place, but the company has not done anything in the matter. Their depots at Marshfield are about the same as the structures in our city before the Northwestern was built, and are nothing like the city should have considering the business that is done there.

Caught a Mink.—D. M. Huntington has added another animal to his menagerie in the shape of a young mink, which he caught in the road near his place. The little fellow is quite tame and docile and lively as a cricket, and quite a curiosity to people who never saw one of the animals. As he eats freely and seems to be enjoying life, there is every chance that he will grow to maturity.

Adjudged Insane.—Mrs. Agnes Young, wife of Thomas Young of the town of Grand Rapids, was taken before Judge Conway on Thursday morning and examined as to her sanity. Mrs. Looze and Pomerville made the examination and found the woman suffering from mental aberration in a marked degree. She was taken to the northern hospital for the insane on Thursday afternoon.

Wrecked at Engle.—A locomotive on the Northwestern road was pretty badly smashed up on Monday near Kellner by the breaking of one of the connecting rods between the drive wheels. The broken rod thrashed around and demolished the cab, but luckily the men on the engine escaped without injury. The locomotive was brought to this city and subsequently taken to the shops.

Beaten by Marshfield.—The combination of ball players that went to Marshfield on Sunday to play the team up there were pretty badly beaten, the score standing 17 to 1 in favor of Marshfield. The boys say, however, that they went up for a good time and had it. The weather was very hot, not the kind one would pick out for this sort of sport.

Excursion to Waupaca.—On Friday, the 18th instant, the Methodist and Congregational Sunday schools will give an excursion to Waupaca, only one dollar for the round trip. The excursion will go over the Wisconsin Central road, going to Marshfield and thence to Waupaca. Train leaves here at 7 a. m., and returning leaves Waupaca at 6 p. m.

Shipping Blueberries.—The blueberry crop is turning out fairly good this year in spite of the reported scarcity earlier in the season. Loads of pickers start for the blueberry patches every day and the sight of the wagon loads of men, women and children that go out in the morning and come back at night is really amusing.

Blue Rock Scores.—The following scores were made at the shooting park last Sunday. First event, 25 birds: Scott 21, Mason 19, Young 19, Church 15, Drumb 18. Second event, 25 birds: Scott 23, Mason 21, Church 18, Drumb 18, Mosher 18. Third event, 25 birds: Scott 20, Mason 22, Mosher 17, Drumb 14, Church 22.

Took In Excursions.—About forty-five persons took in the excursion to Marshfield on Sunday, and about thirty-five went to the Dells. The Grand Rapids band also accompanied the excursion to the Dells, and enlivened the occasion with some of their choicest music.

Street Fair Seems a Cluck.—The committee to secure a guarantee fund for the proposed street fair has been at work for several days and is meeting with general support. The committee hopes to run the guarantee up to about $4,000 in a few days more.—Marshfield News.

Lost a Finger.—James Nolton, who is employed at the mill of the Grand Rapids Lumber company, lost a joint of the first finger of his right hand on Friday by having the member crushed between a dog and the log on the carriage.

Circuses Galore.—This city is enjoying a deluge of circuses just at present, and 'tis said that Buffalo Bill also intends to make the town before the season is over. It would seem as if we were really getting more than our share.

Mrs. Mary Peterson.

The body of Mrs. Mary Peterson of Stevens Point was brought to this city on Monday and buried, the funeral taking place from the Norwegian Moravian church. Mrs. Peterson died on Saturday of last week as the result of an operation for strangled hernia.

Mrs. Peterson was born in Denmark and was sixty-three years old and formerly resided in the town of Sigel. Her husband, P. Peterson, died 18 years ago. Four children survive the mother, they being William Peterson, now in Florida, James of the town of Rudolph, Sophia of Eau Claire and John, who lived with his mother in Stevens Point.

Millinery Stock Sold.

On Friday Miss Grace Getts sold her millinery shop on west side to T. J. Remann, who with his wife, will conduct the establishment in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Remann are from Lakefield, Minn., Mr. Remann being a tailor by trade and Mrs. Remann a milliner. Mr. Remann may engage in the tailoring business here, but has not decided as yet. The new firm expect to occupy the old stand on the west side.

Killed by Lightning.

William Hauke of Marshfield was struck by lightning on Monday afternoon and instantly killed while in the barn of John P. Hume. He was standing with his hands in his pockets when struck and was so instantly killed that when he was picked up he still had his hands in his pockets. Several others near him were severely shocked by the bolt but suffered no permanent hurt.

DELANEY HOTEL BURNS.

Lake Side House with All Its Cottages is Destroyed.

LOSS IS ABOUT $5000.

High Wind Fanned Flames, Causing Them to Spread Rapidly—Fire Started in Kitchen.

DeLaney, Wis., July 14.—The Delaney hotel was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon, together with all its cottages and outbuildings and two large cottages belonging to the hotel. The fire started in the kitchen. The hotel was owned by the late Thomas Delaney of Chicago, and it had been newly furnished and remodeled for the season's patronage by his son, William J. Delaney. This is the fifth hotel built by Delaney, three within a year. The loss is about $5000, partly covered by insurance.

The place was known as "Ironwood" until it was burned three years ago by the late Thomas H. Delaney of Chicago, who owned it. It was named after the ironwood tree which grew in the woods near it. The hotel was built by W. J. Delaney and O. J. Allison of Chicago. Many guests and servants lost their clothing and jewelry and Mr. Allison lost valuable papers.

Two parties belonging to the Delaney hotel, an attorney, Mr. Delaney, and Gene B. and Roy E. Henderson, were also burned. The loss is about $1500.

HORSE THIEVES AT WORK.

GANG IS OPERATING IN WESTERN PART OF STATE.

Many Thefts Have Been Reported—Man Held Up Near West Bend and Horse Stolen.

La Crosse, Wis., July 14.—An organized gang of horse thieves is working in the western part of this state and eastern part of Minnesota. During the past week as many as six stolen horses have been reported to the authorities here from various parts of this section of the country. One was stolen at West Salem Saturday and another at Melrose yesterday. The thieves usually take a buggy also. The sheriff's force had been unsuccessful in their search this far.

West Bend, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—The hired man of I. H. Heller of Chicago, who is spending the summer at Cedar Lake, near here, was stopped by three men near Richfield on Saturday evening and the horse and rig which he was in charge of was taken from him. The three men then drove away with the rig. The sheriff was notified, but he has been unable to get any trace of the men and rig.

MANITOWOC MAN HELD FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER.

John Dietrich Went to Son-in-Law's Home Saturday and Fired at Him.

Manitowoc, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—John Dietrich was arraigned in municipal court this morning charged with having committed an assault with intent to kill upon the person of his stepson, Julius Brink. Dietrich came upon the property of the Schwarzenbart Soda Water Manufacturing Company on Franklin street Saturday evening with the purpose evidently to do injury to his son and his wife. Brink ordered him off the premises, but Dietrich refused to go. An altercation followed, when Dietrich drew a revolver. Brink fled into an outhouse close by. Dietrich followed and fired two shots in rapid succession. He then went and thrust the revolver through an opening in the door, but the revolver would not work. Brink had thrown himself on the floor and this is the only thing that saved his life, for had he been standing the shots would have struck him. The trouble between the parties seems to have arisen out of the separation of Dietrich and his wife some time ago. Since that time Dietrich has on several occasions threatened to take the life of both his son and wife and they have lived in constant fear of him. Saturday afternoon, it is claimed, he publicly declared that he would do so. He was arrested by Officers Duno and Smith, and placed in jail.

MAIN WILL FILED.

Former Madison Senator Leaves an Estate Valued at $100,000.

Madison, Wis., July 14.—Willis S. Main, former state senator and brother-in-law of United States Senator John C. Spooner, who died at his farm in Blooming Grove, July 7, left an estate valued at $100,000, according to the petition for probate filed in the county court. The real estate in Dane county is valued at $70,000, personal estate at $12,000, and property in other forms will bring the value of the estate up to $100,000.

The heirs mentioned in the petition are Mrs. Sophia L. Main, widow; Hamilton W. Main, son; John S. Main, son; Louis B. Main, daughter, all of Madison; Joseph A. Main, son, Blooming Grove; Annie Main, daughter, Milwaukee; Annie Main, daughter, Milwaukee; Carl, Carroll, Ill. The petition was set for hearing at the September term of the court.

TEACHERS CAN DANCE AGAIN.

Cumberland Repeals Rule Passed Against Dancing Five Years Ago.

Cumberland, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—At the regular school meeting an appropriation of $22,500 was voted for the construction of a large modern brick school house. At the same meeting the school board was instructed to repeal the rule which prohibits teachers attending dances. The ruling was made some five years ago, but the sentiment of the people of the city has become very strong against it. The city introduced the resolution asking its repeal, which was passed almost unanimously.

NO HOPE FOR RECOVERY.

Dr. Adams' Physicians Claim that Patient Cannot Regain Health.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 14.—There is practically no change in the condition of the Charles Kendall Adams. His physicians said that while there is no hope of ultimate recovery his patient may linger for weeks, or if a change for the worse occurs the end may come any day. The condition of Mrs. Adams is much improved.

BRAGG MAY BE RECALLED.

STATEMENT IN A PRIVATE LETTER OFFENSIVE TO CUBANS.

Old Age and Lack of Experience Pleaded in Extenuation—"Pig's Tail" an Unfortunate Simile.

Washington, D. C., July 14. Gen. Bragg's indirect reference in his letter to his wife to cost him his place as consul general to Cuba. It is said by diplomatic people here that the use of a pig's tail as part of a simile expressive of the consul general's views is likely to give great offense to the people of Cuba. In fact, the Spanish diplomats lend themselves especially to the use of the pig as an epithet of reproach, and to say, as Gen. Bragg is reported as saying, that "it would be easier to make a whistle out of a pig's tail than to make anything out of the Cubans," means even more in Spanish than in English.

At the state department there is a decided disposition to shield Gen. Bragg, because he is an old man and was a great soldier. Nevertheless, it is admitted at once that if the Cubans call attention to the criticism, Gen. Bragg will have to be recalled at once as a person non grata. Even if President Palma does not object officially it is feared Gen. Bragg's usefulness in Havana will be entirely destroyed unless the unfortunate letter to Mrs. Bragg is disavowed.

As a matter of international usage, the expression by a consul general of the opinion that the people to whom he was sent were unfit for free government would be sufficient to insure his recall. When this is coupled with the use of a seriously offensive simile it is feared that nothing can save Gen. Bragg but an exhibition of unselfish forgetfulness not common in countries where Spanish is spoken.

It is said that if the English, French, or German consul to the United States should be publicly quoted in this way he would be dismissed by this country without ceremony. There is great charity, however, for Gen. Bragg, on account of his age and his lack of experience.

At the Cuban legation the flag floated all day and far into the night, but the whole building was vacant. Minister Quesada having left the city to enjoy a vacation at Chevy Chase.

ONE TRAMP CAPTURED.

Member of Gang of Hoboes Who Killed Conductor Young Near Rhineland Caught.

Rhineland, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—R. T. Smith, a North-Western brakeman, has effected the capture of one of the three men who murdered Conductor Young. He captured the man last night about ten miles from Pelican Lake, on the Cranston branch of the North-Western. Smith had stationed himself on an embankment overlooking the track and, owing to the light of the moon, he could see clearly.

At 11 o'clock Smith saw a man below him, and promptly ordered him to throw up his hands. The man threw up his left hand and yelled that his right was shattered by a bullet and he could not raise it. Smith kept the man covered and found he spoke the truth. He then marched him to Pelican station and brought him here. At 4 o'clock this morning he was taken to jail and his wounds dressed. Two bullets had passed through his arm and the bone was shattered. Doctors report that the arm must be amputated. The man is 34 years old and gives the name of O'Donnell. Nothing was found on him, but he has been identified as one of the men shot by the Pelican lake hunters Sunday.

No correct statement could be obtained from him this morning owing to opiates which had been administered. He indicated to Smith that the entire party could have been captured when he was shot if the Pelican lake men had followed them up.

Rhineland, Wis., July 14.—H. T. Young, a conductor on the North-Western road, was shot through the head by a gang of tramps Saturday night, while he was attempting to put them off his train near here.

After the shooting the trio of hoboes succeeded in making their escape. A posse was organized and the tramps were pursued. Elmer Revere and George Cornaga of Pelican Lake, who gave chase, succeeded in coming up with the tramps yesterday morning. An exchange of shots ensued during which it is claimed that the murderer was badly wounded. He was carried away by his companions.

One tramp was arrested yesterday, charged with being implicated in the affair of Saturday. He admits being on the train at the time, but says he did not take a hand in the encounter. He will be held pending the capture of the other tramps.

Young is a veteran railroad man and leaves a large family at Antioch. The North-Western road has offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the tramps. Oshkosh county has offered an additional $100 for their arrest.

ENDS LIFE WITH ROPE.

Mrs. Theodore Walt of North Prairie, Waukesha County, Wis., Commits Suicide.

Waukesha, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—With her mind temporarily deranged by the shock of the recent death of her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Walt, aged 60 years, committed suicide yesterday morning during a very noticeable state of melancholy. She accomplished her design by hanging herself to a rafter in a deserted house not far from her residence at North Prairie, and she had been dead for over an hour when found by her daughter who was searching for her. Mrs. Walt was many years ago, adjudged insane and was sent to the Northern hospital at Oshkosh, from which she was released about twelve years ago. She had shown no signs of any further mental trouble until a few months ago when her daughter, who resided near this city, died rather suddenly and from that time on she became the frequent victim of melancholy. Yesterday morning she got up from the breakfast table and left the house. When two hours passed and she had not returned, the members of the family commenced a systematic search and she was finally found by her daughter, hanging in one of the upper rooms of the unused building. The coroner's jury met yesterday afternoon and decided that she came to her death by her own hand. Mrs. Walt is survived by her husband and four children. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Tobacco Crop is Promising.

Edgemoor, Wis., July 14.—The Wisconsin Tobacco Reporter says: "The new crop is making a remarkable growth in all sections, though the heavy rains of late have delayed some needed cultivation. It is generally admitted that the crop never looked more promising at this season of the year, with prospects of an unusually early harvest."

COUPLE CELEBRATE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

CALEB COOK. MRS. CALEB COOK.

Baraboo, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—Caleb Cook and wife, who celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary this week, have had some unique experiences. While he was employed on the Erie canal more than sixty years ago he decided to take a ride over all the railroads in the state of New York. This he succeeded in accomplishing twice in one half day. At that time there was but one road in operation in the state and that was between Albany and Schenectady, a distance of seventeen miles.

After their marriage in Webster, Monroe county, N. Y., they came to Wisconsin, making the journey around the lakes to Milwaukee, and then to Kenosha, where they arrived on October 4, thus ending their honeymoon trip. Breakfast was taken in a log tavern, the only place of its kind at Kenosha then. In his excitement to obtain some government land Mr. Cook wandered into Lake county, Illinois, where he secured a farm and resided upon it for a dozen years.

When they came to Sauk county in 1853 there were but a few huts at Baraboo and Kibbourn, Redshurg and the smaller centers of population in this vicinity were unthought of.

He was a member of the county board when the court house at Baraboo was built and was clerk of the last grand jury that convened in this county. During the administrations of Buchanan and Lincoln he was postmaster at Deltona and has been assessor, town clerk or justice of the peace for nearly all his residence in this state.

After forming the habit of using tobacco and keeping in practice for forty years he concluded to discontinue the weed and has refused to chew or smoke since quitting the habit.

Mr. Cook has a remarkable number of ancestors noted for longevity, and these he can trace back to the beginning of civilization in New England. His forefathers came from Scotland and were among the first settlers in Rhode Island.

There are four surviving children, nineteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. Mr. Cook is 85 and his wife is seven years younger.

STRUCK WITH A HAMMER.

Farmer Living in Town of Scott Alleged to Have Hit Neighbor.

MAN MAY NOT RECOVER.

One Rib was Broken and the Victim's Lungs Were Penetrated by the Hammer.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—Truman Young, a farmer residing in the town of Scott near here, is being held here on a serious charge.

It is alleged that he struck Andrew Brown, a neighboring farmer, in the back under the shoulder, with a hammer. One rib was broken and the hammer is said to have penetrated the man's lungs.

Brown is reported in a critical condition as a result of the attack and Young is being held to await the outcome of the injuries. A preliminary hearing has been set for July 15.

WILL HOLD POW-WOW.

Twenty Indian Tribes Have Agreed to Attend Big Friendship Festival.

Black River Falls, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—No-Gin-Ka (Little Soldier), second medicine chief of the Winnebago, has gone to Nebraska to secure a large delegation of leading Indians from the reservation to attend and take part in the coming friendship festival that is to be held at the old sacred and historic hunting haunts of the Winnebago Indians.

The festival will be held this fall, and at that time the grounds which have been purchased by (Chief White Buffalo) Thomas R. Roddy of Chicago will be given to the Indians as a present at this gathering, which will be one of the largest since 1820, then held at Prairie du Chien. About twenty tribes will be represented at this meeting. Green Cloud, the big war chief, is now in Nebraska, but has consented to return in the fall and take an active part in the ceremonies.

Tomahawks of big chiefs will be hurled, speeches will be made, and peace pipes will be smoked, after which dancing, feasting and all kinds of presents and peace offerings are made to each other.

The tribes that meet at this time will ever after be friendly to each other. E. R. Roddy has been in this section three weeks working among the Indians for this gathering. He has now gone to Northern Wisconsin to consult chiefs of other tribes and make further arrangements as to time and dates.

FORTUNE FOR BADGER.

Judge Chase of Indiana Leaves Immense Estate to Oconto Relatives—Children Disinherited.

La Porte, Ind., July 12.—Judge D. H. Chase, a noted Indiana jurist, died recently at Logansport, leaving the bulk of a large fortune to his wife, William Chase of Oconto, Wis., who is credited with being immensely wealthy. Judge Chase disinherited three children because they had incurred his displeasure. A conference will be held at Oconto regarding the disposition of the estate, and the statement is made at Logansport that the Wisconsin millionaire will possibly hand-some for the disinherited children of his Indiana relatives, conditions and as to the will is made in the court.

BREWERIES COMBINED.

Two Plants at La Crosse are United—Will be Enlarged.

La Crosse, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—A new brewing company is about to be organized in this city to be known as the Grand Helman Brewing Association, taking in the local plants of George Zeisler & Sons and G. Helman Brewing Company. The new concern is to be capitalized with $150,000. John Gund, Jr., formerly with the John Gund Brewing Company of this city, is the promoter. He proposes to greatly enlarge the present plant of the G. Helman Brewing Company and to increase its capacity. George Zeisler and E. T. Mueller are the other promoters.

WHOLE TOWN WIPED OUT.

Village of Welcome, Outagamie County, Destroyed by Fire.

LOSS REACHES 100,000.

Dozen Stores, North-Western Depot, Sawmill, Church and Other Buildings Destroyed.

Appleton, Wis., July 11.—The village of Welcome, formerly known as Bear Creek, thirty miles northwest of this city, was destroyed by fire today. A dozen stores, the postoffice, Chicago & North-Western depot and a lumber mill had been destroyed by noon and the fire was still raging. The loss may reach $100,000.

Welcome, formerly known as Bear Creek, has a population of 300 and is situated on the North-Western railway in the township of Deer Creek in Outagamie county, thirty-two miles northwest of Appleton and eight miles from Clintonville.

Late this afternoon the following buildings had been reported entirely destroyed: North-Western depot, postoffice, general store of A. A. Ralsler, Charles Ralsler's hardware store, E. P. Ralsler's general store, the Ralsler family store, Knappstein's saloon and a number of barns. The fire is still raging furiously and the entire business block is burned.

Following, according to Pulk's Gazetteer, are the leading business houses of the village:

Mrs. L. Albrecht, meat market. C. G. Ralsler, hardware dealer. John Butler, saloon. Commercial hotel, A. J. Cannaday, proprietor.

A. J. Damon, furniture and caskets. P. H. Dempsey, saloon. F. A. W. Demis, jeweler. A. Freeman, general store. John Hillebrandt, harness maker. Charles Hillebrandt, general store. Ralston Maywood, E. W. Hilde, prop. John Klefer, general store. Julius Large, blacksmith. T. H. Murphy, general store and elevator. Gus Noss, hardware store. P. H. general store. J. W. Ralsler, store and sawmill.

Many Cases of Mad Dogs Have Been Reported and Residents Become Much Alarmed.

Janesville, Wis., July 12.—Hydrophobia is quite prevalent in this section of the country and the residents in the country districts are becoming quite alarmed over the increase of mad dogs. Cattle have been bitten on many farms and the loss has been considerable.

Several people have also been bitten. Three children have been sent to the Pasteur institute in Chicago for treatment. The latest victims are the 3-year-old daughter of Mayor Richardson of this city and 15-year-old Scamling also of this city. The two persons were attacked while with a camping party near this city.

FEW BUILDINGS REMAIN IN TOWN OF WELCOME.

Entire Village Almost Wiped Out—Fire—Hotel, Three Saloons and Two Stores Left.

Appleton, Wis., July 12.—Very little remains of the business district of the village of Welcome, thirty miles northwest of here, which was visited by a destructive fire yesterday. The village is without fire protection and after the flames once secured a headway, the entire place was doomed. Many families are rendered homeless as a majority of the stores which were destroyed were used as dwellings by the owners. The residence part of the village escaped as it is located a short distance from the center of the town. The loss is estimated at $50,000 with only a very small amount of insurance.

The buildings destroyed were: Fred Ralsler, general store and cold storage; Lewis Albrecht, meat market; Mrs. Butler, saloon; Dr. J. A. Lyons, drug store and office; postoffice; George Ralsler, hardware; A. J. Damon, furniture; E. P. Ralsler, general store; Charles Hillebrandt, harness maker; Armstrong & J. L. Latta, saloon; William Dempsey blacksmith.

MEN DESERT FACTORY.

Wausau Company Pays Its Employees in Non-Negotiable Checks and They Go on Strike.

Wausau, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—The Underwood Veneer Company is experiencing trouble with its force of men over the fact that the firm has recently adopted a plan of paying its employees with non-negotiable checks. This morning 52 of the 110 men put on their coats after 9 o'clock and walked over town to get their checks cashed. When they returned they were informed by the manager that they would be given plenty of time to get their money, and the mill is closed temporarily. The adoption of this plan is to prevent those inclined to drink from getting their checks cashed in saloons, thereby depriving their families of money and also to prevent miners from spending part of their wages and reporting home a less amount than they actually receive, thereby giving out the impression that the company is paying "starvation wages." J. A. Underwood, manager of the company, states that the new rule will be strictly adhered to even if he has to get a new force of men.

MYSTERY AT SUPERIOR.

Body of Shipyard Workman Found Floating in Slip—Head was Badly Bruised.

West Superior, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—Murder or accident? That is the question Coroner Dudley is asking concerning the death of Erick Kyrtala, a workman recently employed at the shipyards whose body was found floating in Tupper slip today.

A black eye is the only mark upon the man that is likely to lead to a clue and the police are working on it. It is evident that the body had been in the water for several days and none of his acquaintances had seen him since about the fourth.

Inquiry has failed to disclose any rights in the vicinity of the slip that may have caused the tragedy and it is possible that the body was given him early in the day of the Fourth celebration, and that the man afterward wandered too near the slip when in a celebration condition.

YACHT BUILDERS EXPAND.

Constructors of Famous Racet Tecumseh Preparing to Branch Out.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 12. Jones & LaBorde, builders of the yachts Milwaukee and Tecumseh, intend to branch out on a larger scale in the future. A stock company is being organized and larger quarters are to be obtained. The two victorious yachts should bring considerable work for the local yacht builders and the two experts are preparing for any rush which may ensue. Plans for yachts are also to be constructed in the future, as they have had several requests for them recently.

NEW PRIEST AT RICHMOND.

Rev. Francis of Washington Accepts Call to Wisconsin Parish.

La Porte, Ind., July 12.—[Special.]—The chapter of Notre Dame has closed its sessions at the university. The announcement of the annual changes of the locations of priests removes Rev. P. J. Francis of Washington, D. C., to the large Catholic parish at Richmond, Wis. Rev. J. Carroll of Watertown, Wis., will be connected the coming year with the faculty of the new Catholic university at Portland, Or.

GLOVE FACTORY TO LOCATE AT SHEBOYGAN.

Ross-Sellinger Company of Chicago Contemplate Moving Entire Plant from Chicago Soons.

Sheboygan, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—The Ross-Sellinger Company of Chicago is considering a proposition from Geo. B. Matton of this city, who offers to rent up a four-story building as a factory for the glove company, now employing 300 hands in Chicago. The company is running a factory here, employing forty hands. The entire plant will be located here.

LA CROSSE LABORERS DEMAND HIGHER WAGES.

Want Increase of 25 Cents Per Day and Shorter Hours of Work—Demand Not Granted.

La Crosse, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—The entire crew of laborers working on the gravel trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road east of here struck this morning for higher wages. They were refused their demands and all were brought back to the city.

They want $1.75 instead of $1.50, claiming that the necessities of life are now so high that they cannot afford to work for the latter price. About seventy-five men are on strike. It is expected that other laborers working on other parts of the road will shortly join them.

Another demand is that they be taken from the city at 7 o'clock instead of at 5:30 in the morning and brought back at 5 instead of 7 or 8 o'clock at night.

KAUKAUNA LIGHT LITIGATION IS ENDED.

Electric Light Company Agrees to a Compromise with the Municipality in the Matter.

Kaukauna, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—A final settlement of the whole electric light company litigation with the city of Kaukauna is in sight. Some time since Mayor Mulholland appointed a committee to whom was given power to arrange a compromise in the matter where by the company would concede somewhat to the city and thus be able to secure the pay due them for electric lighting. At a meeting held last evening the company made yet more liberal concessions, and it is now thought the whole trouble will be soon concluded.

The city is to get an all-night lamp at $65 per year. This is the same price they have heretofore paid for a 1 o'clock light. The company also proposes to rewire the city officials' room, council room and police office and furnish free light therein until July, 1904.

JUDGE H. E. HUBBARD DIES AT LA CROSSE.

Well-Known Lawyer Who Lived There Fifty Years Dies After Lingering Illness.

La Crosse, Wis., July 11.—Judge Harvey E. Hubbard, for fifty-one years a resident of this city and one of its very first settlers, died this morning after a lingering illness of three months. He was appointed postmaster under President Lincoln and held the office for many years, being the youngest postmaster the city ever had. He was judge of the criminal court for many years also and was in many ways prominently connected with the early history of Western Wisconsin.

Harvey Hubbard was born at Pompey, Oneida county, New York, on March 17, 1830. He received his early education in the schools there until he was 13 years of age, when he entered Nunda Academy, remaining there two years, when he came West with his parents, who settled at Milwaukee. There he clerked in a store for two years, at the same time studying law with Hayden Powers, and when he became of age he was admitted to the bar. He moved to La Crosse in 1851, making the trip by stage and steamer. He has resided here ever since and has held many public offices.

FOUR MEN INJURED IN RAILROAD WRECK.

Work Train on North-Western Road is Derailed at Malone, Near Fond du Lac.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—An eastbound work train of the Chicago & Sheboygan division of the Chicago & North-Western railway was wrecked shortly after 7 o'clock this morning, and a large number of men were injured. The accident was caused by a spreading of the rails. Four men were injured.

The names of the injured are: Roy E. Harris, fireman, residing at North Fond du Lac, right arm and leg badly injured. Edward J. Bolan, engineer, of Harvard, Ill., left leg badly bruised. Cassius Dettler of Kenosha, stone cutter, arm and side injured. Alex. Demers of this city, stone cutter, cut about the head.

The engine was backing with the train of four cars, all of which were loaded with stone. All the cars were derailed and badly demolished.

ANDREWS TRIAL POSTPONED.

Hearing in Episcopal Church Case will be Held in September.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 11.—Bishop Grifton yesterday announced that the hearing in the ecclesiastical trial of Rev. M. C. Andrews will not be held until some time in September. The serious mental troubles of Andrews are still available at present and this caused the postponement.

Federal Building for Chippewa Falls.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—In an address before the Progressive League last night, Congressman John J. Jenkins spoke encouragingly regarding Chippewa Falls' possibilities of securing a government building. He said he had been promised support before leaving Washington and is confident of securing appropriation.

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS.

Wages and Cost of Living.

The United States Steel Corporation has raised the wages of about 100,000 men 10 per cent. It is estimated that this will add $4,000,000 to the yearly payroll. This is a political move. It forestalls applications for an advance in wages, which would probably have been made in a short time. The men employed in the steel and iron industries are working full time. They have been getting wages which two years ago seemed quite fair, but a dollar does not buy so much of the necessities of life as it did two years ago.

Workingmen are often reproached unjustly for their urgent demands for higher pay in prosperous seasons, when they are steadily employed and are receiving what seems to their critics fair wages. The critics are apt to overlook the fact that, while the price of labor is going up, the cost of living is going up also, and if the latter goes up more rapidly than the former the workingman may feel pinched and become dissatisfied. He hears a great deal about prosperity and sees evidences of it all around him, but he finds that his income does not go quite so far as it did when wages were a little lower.

The great item of expenditure with the workingman with a family is food. More than half his earnings go to buy it. The price of foodstuffs has been unusually high for some time. It is not surprising, in view of the increased cost of a meal, that there should be appeals in so many quarters for higher wages.

When business is less active and profits fall off, the United States Steel Corporation may wish to reduce wages. To that reduction a fall in the cost of living will not reconcile the men in its employ. They want higher wages when it costs more to live; they fight hard against lower wages even though the cost of living has gone down. This is not logical, but it is natural.—Chicago Tribune.

Vaccination Valid.

The Minnesota Supreme Court declares vaccination valid. It does not of course pronounce on ways and means, it does not take up the cause of vaccinationists and anti-vaccinationists and declare one right and the other wrong. This would save of ancient theological controversy as participated in by the State, and indeed the attendant acrimony has been very similar. But the State merely affirms the right of a community to take all recognized measures looking toward the preservation of the public health.

Vaccination is such a recognized measure. Its virtue has been questioned, and its opponents are clearly within their academic right when they summon vaccination before the bar and find indi-ment against it. Vaccination may be as serious, as fatal, as the disease against which it inoculates, and, moreover, it is not always a preventive, never a certain preventive. All this the anti-vaccinationists are justified in asserting and in attempting to prove.

But the State moves slowly and it has recognized vaccination as a necessity in preserving the public health during times of epidemic. The State gives to a health commissioner power to employ all recognized means to preserve that public health. It grants him, by this recent decision, the right to compel vaccination. It might do otherwise. The State might determine to have nothing to do with vaccine. It might determine that every smallpox patient and every person exposed to smallpox should be vaccinated by the common hangman, should be hanged by the neck until dead, or shot down in ranks. It has the power to do this. It has the power, although the individual forgets it, of life and death. In the case of leprosy this is recognized. Solitary incarceration is death in life. The State is the supreme arbiter of good and ill to the people.

The vaccination controversy will continue. Health officers may still insist that children shall be vaccinated before entering school. The law of compulsory education may insist that these children attend school. The net is close.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Happiness of the Home.

Should a wife be bothered by her husband's troubles? Let us change the wording to read: Is a husband bothered by his wife's troubles? The majority of married men will give an answer in the negative. No matter what the trials of the hours have been, the wife endeavors to brush them one side, when evening comes. She is then always better dressed than at any time during the day, she usually has a happy smile of welcome and she adds fresh laurels to the most magnificent institution the world knows—the American home. There are many vexatious trials, multitudinous cross events of a housewife's day that are never mentioned. They are borne bravely, and wrongs are remedied as best they can be without indicting the burden upon the man.

Now the question arises, Does the husband bear his trials with the same bravery and carry the same encouraging smile when he comes home? If things have gone wrong at the office or at the store is not my lord usually in a despondent frame of mind and does he not carry his worries to the fireside with him? It is done for comfort and consolation, no doubt, but that is hardly fair. Talk about the dependence of woman all you way, but when the test comes it is the man who is dependent and who seeks succor in woman's tender appreciation. This should not be.

Of course there are business affairs which must be told to one's wife—affairs which affect the family's future and concerning which she should be made acquainted, but the average care of the day can be cast aside until the morrow, and it should not intrude on the happiness of the home.—Cincinnati Post.

Invasion of Northwest Canada.

Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest are repeating with great rapidity the history of the winning of our West. The problem of absorbing the Galicians, Russians and other refractory races is specifically Canadian, but the remarkable influx of American settlers in these regions must affect both Canada and ourselves. As yet we have no accurate statistics of this agrarian invasion. Yet some idea of its significance may be gained from the following figures. In the years 1896-1900 the total immigration from America to Canada was, respectively, 9,119, 11,345 and 15,500. During the first five months of the present year the Great Northern Railroad alone carried 25,000 immigrants into Manitoba. While some of these were taken directly from the incoming steamers, many were either American-born or thoroughly Americanized. This cannot continue without producing its effect upon the relations of the two countries. A constant social interchange and common agricultural interests in the Northwest will more and more reduce the boundary to its definition as an "imaginary line."—New York Evening Post.

Schwab's Foolish Advice.

Schwab has been giving some more foolish advice to young men. To the graduates of the Pennsylvania State College he said:

"The worst thing you can do is to start in life with influence. Nothing will ever do you so much injury. Never ask your friends to help you."

This is advice that Mr. Schwab never acted upon himself. Nor did any other successful man. To depend entirely upon influence and not upon one's self and one's own efforts is, of course, fatally wrong. No young man who does that can succeed, however potent the influence in his favor may be. But at the same time, true worth and intelligent, earnest effort on the part of any young man will attract to him friends and influences that will be mightily helpful to him. These are not to be despised, but are to be cultivated and treasured and used. In the complex life of this age individual effort counts for little unless joined in and harmony with forces that control.—St. Louis Chronicle.

"These lend to the social atmosphere a tone which is lacking in other American cities."

NEW KING IS A HUSTLER.

Indolence of the Former Prince of Wales Has Vanished.

Since King Edward's promotion from the position of heir apparent to that of sovereign, a good many rather significant changes have been observable in his character and none of them is more striking than that which has taken place in his attitude towards his responsibility, and harder still to make sure that he turned up at the different private and state functions, where his presence was indispensable.

Comparatively speaking King Edward has not made so many changes in his routine or in the various palace staffs, but for everyone that has been made there has been some business-like reason. When it came to head-chopping the king showed himself no respecter of persons. Queen Victoria had given the charge of Windsor castle to the Duke of Argyll, but the king wanted to have the management in his own hands and so he placed Lord Esher, one of his most trusted servants, at the head of the castle affairs.

As His Child Saw Him.

A prominent real estate man in Los Angeles had an experience a few evenings ago that kept him guessing for a little bit as to whether he should feel complimented or otherwise. He was at home with one little daughter while his wife and another of the children were downtown. Darkness was coming on and the little girl was anxiously watching for her mother's return. Her nervousness grew apace, in spite of the father's attempts at reassurance. At length the little one burst into tears, saying:

"I just can't help it! I need mamma, and I must have her!"

"Do you do this way when your mamma is here and I'm away?" asked the father.

"No, of course, not," replied the little one. "Cause then there's some grown-up person about the house."—Los Angeles Herald.

Wanted Specific Information.

The teacher had been impressing upon her class the advantage of a competency gained by honest, hard work over one gained by scheming and even more questionable means and, thinking she had made a great impression upon her small charges, she proceeded to catechize them on the subject: "Once upon a time there were two rich men, one of whom made his fortune by honest industry, while the other made his by fraud. Now, which of these two men would you prefer to be?"

ONE GREAT NOVELIST.

VARYING CAREER OF JAMES FENNIMORE COOPER.

Unpromising Youth of This Recognized Genius—His Long-Dormant Powers—Change from Popularity to Unpopularity—Foremost American Novelist.

James Fennimore Cooper, the dean of American novelists, holds a position in our native literature at once unique and distinctive. It matters but little now that his literary genius should have remained dormant for so long a time as a diamond in the rough before accident chipped off the crude exterior, disclosing the brilliant jewel within.

It is of small importance that his early life, spent in aimless pursuits, was wholly without promise of future achievements, and soon but a regrettable memory will also be the fact that during the last few years of his life through misunderstandings and misrepresentations his breast was filled with feelings of deep rancor toward men who should have been his friends and who in turn denounced both him and the products of his pen. These circumstances, the inevitable contradictory accompaniments of recognized ability, have waned indistinctly into a hazy background, against which stands boldly the undisputed truth that the author of "The Spy" and "The Pilot" is justly worthy of all praise that has been or may be accorded him.

The life of this varying popular and unpopular author had its beginning September 15, 1789, at Burlington, N. J. His parents were both of Quaker extraction. Soon after the close of the Revolutionary war the Cooper family established a household within the borders of New York State near the headwaters of the Susquehanna River. They encouraged the populating of this vicinity and subsequently laid out the site of Cooperstown. The Cooper family decided to make their permanent home in the town founded by them and in 1790 completed the erection of a spacious manor house, known as Otsego Hall, which was for many years the most commodious and stately private residence in central New York.

To every reader that has been charmed with the spell of Cooper's Indian romances, the surroundings of his boyhood days are significant. During those years the foremost pioneers of emigration had barely begun to push their way westward through the Mohawk Valley, the first available highway to the west. Out of the forest that bordered Otsego Lake Indians came for barter, or possibly with hostile intent, and from these no doubt Cooper drew the portraits of the red men who live in his pages. Such wild surroundings could not but stimulate a naturally active imagination and the influence of the wilderness, augmented afterwards by the somewhat similar influence of the sea, pervaded his entire life.

From a private tutor he received his earliest education and at the age of 13 entered the freshman class of Yale College. According to his own account, he learned but little at college. His love of out-of-doors freedom led him to neglect his books and he roamed about and explored the rugged hills northward of New Haven and the equally picturesque shores of Long Island Sound. Gradually he became wilder and more persistent in his defiance of academic restraints and was finally expelled.

Upon leaving his studies the love of activity and adventure laid hold on the youth and he decided to take up the life of a seaman. In 1806 he made his first voyage as a sailor before the mast on the ship Sterling, sailing from New York with a cargo of flour for foreign markets. After this he served for a time as midshipman on the Vesuvius and was later ordered to Oswego, N. Y., with a construction party to build a brig for service on Lake Ontario. Then he was given charge of the gunboat flotilla on Lake Champlain and was subsequently ordered to the Wasp. In 1811 he married a daughter of John Peter DeLancey, of Westchester County, N. Y., and resigned his position in the navy to settle into a quiet, domestic life. In deference to his wife's wishes he built his home in Westchester County on what was known as the Angervine farm in the town of Scarsdale, in which locality many stirring events of the Revolution had taken place. The impressions gained from the historic associations surrounding him here were of inestimable value to him in the descriptive coloring of "The Spy." There still remains standing near Scarsdale the ruins of a chimney once within the Disbrow House, wherein the original of Cooper's Harvey Birch is said to have successfully hid from his pursuers.

At 30 years of age James Fennimore Cooper was following a quiet, commonplace existence, and no thought of a literary life had as yet entered his mind. One day while reading an English novel to his wife he half-jestingly remarked: "I believe I could write a better story myself." His wife was sure that he could and so encouraged the idea that he made the attempt. His initial work was "Precaution," a novel in two volumes, published anonymously in an inferior manner during the year 1820. This first novel was in no respects a sample of the author's talent. It dealt with high life in England, a subject with which the writer was personally unfamiliar, save through the pages of fiction, and while the venture can hardly be said to have enabled him to taste of the sweets of authorship, it had the effect of stimulating the desire to write. Its modest success caused his friends to urge him upon some more familiar theme, and remembering an interesting tale of a spy that he had heard some years before from the lips of John Jay, he set about putting it into a story. "The Spy" was the result and during the winter of 1821-22 the American public awoke to the fact that it possessed a novelist of its own, and the immediate success of the book, which was unprecedented at the time in the annals of American literature, determined Cooper's future career.

The next five years witnessed the publication of some of his best works, among them being "The Pioneers," "The Pilot," and "Lionel Lincoln." In 1826 his popularity had attained its zenith with the publication of "The Last of the Mohicans." But with fame came envy and invidiousness from his contemporaries at home and abroad. English reviewers claimed him as a native, fixing his birthplace in the Isle of Man, and denounced him as a renegade. Naturally of a headstrong and combative disposition, he resented the accusations and insinuations thrust upon him and in so doing could not help but give offense to a large class. His self-assertive manner made him enemies among men who could not understand his nature. He made frequent visits to England, during which his company was sought by the most distinguished men of the time, and during one of these visits he was unwillingly brought into a controversy over the economy and efficiency of the United States government. His utterances on this subject were misconstrued and his published letters brought forth what now seems an altogether unexplainable bitterness against their author.

As one of the most successful of authors, Cooper's fame is assured. His libel suits and controversies are forgotten, his offensive criticisms are seldom read, and he is remembered only as the most brilliant and successful of American novelists.

A Lined Descendant.

An Englishman applied to the herald's college for a coat of arms. In such a case it is pleasant to be able to borrow one from a celebrated ancestor. The man in question could not remember anything about his great-grandparents, and therefore, of course, could not mention any achievement by them which could be used as the basis of a coat of arms. But the official to whom he applied was not easily discouraged.

"Have you not done something yourself?" he asked.

"Nothing, I fear," said the man, adding as a pathetic antithesis that once, having been locked in a London Prison for debt, he had found means to escape from an upper window.

"And how did you get down?"

"I got a cord, fixed it around the neck of King Lud's statue, and let myself down."

"Just the thing! There you have it—honor enough. Lineally descended from King Lud. His coat of arms is good enough for you!"

Cleans Ship at Sea.

For cleaning ships an ingenious and simple device was recently invented, its object being to clean quickly and thoroughly the bottom or sides of a vessel.

It consists of two separated brushes, which are supported by arms, and of a hollow body portion, which is connected with the arms. It has a hose coupling and a jet nozzle, which is so fixed that it is opposite to the front or cleaning face of the brushes. It is this nozzle which spurs the brushes on to work and enables them to move rapidly over the bottom, and, if desired, the sides of a ship.

This device can be operated by any one, and those who have seen it tested say that it does its work remarkably well.

FLASHES OF FUN

"I am afraid that Biggins plays golf on Sunday." "May be," said the contemptuous rival. "But if so it's the only day in the seven on which he does play it."—Washington Star.

Teacher—Now, Ethel, who wrote the Elegy in a Country Churchyard? Ethel—Please, ma'am, it was Willie Smith. I seen him goin' in the churchyard at recess, ma'am.—Chicago Daily News.

Mr. Blugo—I am a floor walker and buyer for Lacey and Skirts. Mr. Bango—Arduous job. It must be a great relief to get home nights. Mr. Bingo—Well, no; I am floor walker and buyer for that house, too.—Judge.

Crabbe—To-day for the first time I was really delighted to hear Miss Nerdore's piano going. Ascum—Something worth listening to, eh? Crabbe—I should say. I heard the installment men taking it away.—Philadelphia Press.

Yeast—They say the darkest hour is just before the dawn. Crimsonbeak—Yes; well I know, when I've gone home in the morning, and knew my wife was waiting for me, thinks I have looked unusually black.—Yonkers Statesman.

Attorney for the Defense—You are a blackguard and a bluff, sir!

Attorney for the Prosecution—And you, sir, are a shyster and a rogue!

The Court—Come, come, gentlemen. Let us get down to the disputed points in this case.—Stuart Set.

Sunday School Teacher—And when Dollah cut Samson's hair he became mild as a lamb, and there was no fight in him. Do you understand that, Tommy? Tommy—Well, I know it makes yer feel awful 'shamed of yerself when yer mother cuts yer hair.

"He does not have much admiration for modern actors, authors or public men of any sort." "No," answered Miss Chryenne; "he is one of those people who believe that nothing is as good as it used to be, except their own opinions."—Washington Star.

Mr. Van Albert—Great Scott! Why are not all these dishes washed? Mrs. Van Albert—Because the cook is using the kitchen table. Mr. Van Albert—In what way? Mrs. Van Albert—She is playing a game of ping-pong with the policeman.—Brooklyn Life.

Guilty—"Do you know anything about hypnotism?" asked the girl in the pink waist. "Well," replied the flirty-and-kind maid, as she held up her left hand to display a sparkling solitaire to better advantage, "you can judge for yourself."—Chicago Daily News.

"And does your dolly close its eyes?" said the minister, visiting at the house of a parishioner. "No, sir," replied the little thing; "but I'm going to take her to church some day, and see if she will; papa says nearly everybody goes to sleep there!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Bedwin—Heller has a rather offensive way with him. He doesn't know me, never saw me but once before, and yet he walks up with a provoking coolness and called me "my good man." Ticknor—Called you good man, did he? Oh, well, as you say, he doesn't know you.

SDR Booming: Eastern Man—How are things in Dugout City now? Western Man—Booming, just a-booming, why, I happened to want a little spending money last week, and it didn't take me half an hour to get a third mortgage on my house.—New York Weekly.

Jenks—I should think you humorists would get lots of funny squibs out of this new plan to exterminate the mosquitoes. Hugh Morist—Not much. It's really serious. If the plan succeeds, as it promises to, what on earth will we have to joke about in the summer time?—Philadelphia Record.

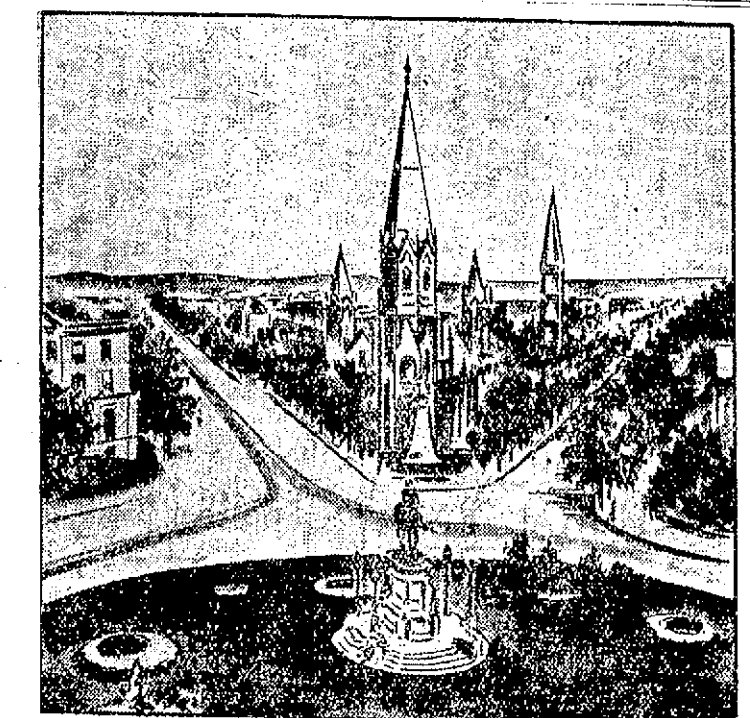

Mr. Ascum—I was rather surprised that you didn't contribute to that charity. Mr. Phil Enthrop—I didn't have my check book with me. Mr. Ascum—But a fifty-cent piece would have looked big to them. Mr. Phil Enthrop—How the deuce could I write my name on a fifty-cent piece?—Philadelphia Press.

Mrs. Greene—Miss Black and that Brown girl made themselves ridiculously prominent at the musicale last night. It was positively scandalous! Mrs. White—For mercy's sake, what did they do? Mrs. Greene—Do? They just sat there all the evening listening to the music and never passed a word between them.—Boston Transcript.

The Boston Boy: "Lookin' fer a bird's nest, sonny?" asked the good-natured Westerner of a 7-year-old boy whom he met in Boston Common. "No, sir," replied the intellectual prodigy, as he continued to gaze up into the tree; "I am merely endeavoring to correctly classify this tree as a botanical product."—Columbus State Journal.

A Boston servant, like many of her class, does not know her age. She has lived with one family eleven years, and has always been 28. But not long ago she read in the newspaper of an old woman who had died at the age of 100. "Maybe I'm as old as that myself," said she. "Indeed, I can't remember the time when I wasn't alive."

"Canvases?" said the artist, dattered by the presence of the millionaire in his studio. "Yes, sir. I shall be happy to show you my best canvases. Something allegorical? Or do you prefer a landscape?" "What I want," said Mr. Newrich, the eminent contractor, with decision, "is something about a yard and a half long and a yard wide, to cover some cracks in the freestone."

No other city on earth has as well paved streets and they are kept immaculately clean. The system of street railways is mostly underground electric. The electric light wires and telegraph and telephone lines are nearly all in conduits underground, leaving nothing above to mar the city's beauty. ## STRANGE ROBBERS.

Mystery on an Ocean Liner Explained at Last.

Not many weeks ago the newspapers published accounts of mysterious grayhound robberies on one of the ocean grayhounds plying between New York and Liverpool. The authorities on board ship exerted themselves to their utmost, but no clue to the offenders could be obtained. Stateroom after stateroom was entered and in nearly every case some valuable jewelry was extracted. Scotland Yards was summoned, but the most astute thief catchers of that celebrated agency failed to meet with any success. Later developments have thrown some light on the mystery. On board, receiving the constant attention of a lady and gentleman passenger, was a fine, large group of ostriches consigned to one J. N. Percival, Paris, France. The lady and gentleman, after the steamer landed, disappeared, as did the flock of feathered beauties. All trace of the birds was lost until the other day when they were unloaded at the docks at New Orleans. The tag, however, had been changed and one of the birds was missing. It turned out to be a most valuable bird, however, and the discovery was the work of a New York sleuth hound. At every visit to the hold of the steamer by the aforesaid lady and gentleman this particular ostrich was fed a jewel—either watch, diamond, ring or some other bright article purloined by this couple from the staterooms of their fellow passengers. This particular ostrich seemed to feast on jewelry. Be as it may, the bird's feathers adorn some Parisian, and the contents of its stomach await identification in the office of the Chief of Police of New Orleans. The lady and gentleman are in the hands of the Paris police who arrested them as they were about to sail for America after having reshipped the ostriches to New York. Having no reason to return the birds as the real culprit had been sacrificed on the other side, the society for the prevention of cruelty to ostriches sold them to the agent of the great Sells-Downs Show, which will exhibit in Grand Rapids, Tuesday, July 22.

To The Stockholders and Patrons, Present and Prospective, of The Electric and Water Company of Grand Rapids Wisconsin:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE:—That at a Regular Meeting of the Board of Directors held at the office of said Company, on the 10th day of July, A. D. 1902, the following resolution was duly passed and adopted:

"Resolved by the Board of Directors that hereafter all persons, firms, or corporations are strictly prohibited from connecting any wires or electrical appliances of any nature or kind whatsoever with the lines of this Company, unless a permit in writing from the manager of the Company has been obtained, authorizing such connections; and no patron or stockholder of this Company shall be permitted to connect with the wire or the current furnished by this Company, any lamps, fan motors or other appliances whatsoever, unless they have been approved by the manager of this Company."

"And Be It Further Resolved, That all wiring of buildings must be done in accordance with the rules of this Company and National Board of Fire Underwriters, and that this Company will not connect its wires or electrical currents with any wires or electrical appliances in any building unless the wiring of such building has, during the course of constructing, been inspected by a competent employee of this Company, and hereafter a fee of ten cents, for every opening inspected, will be charged, and all other work will be performed at cost as heretofore. And this Company will hereafter absolutely refuse to connect with the wires or electrical appliances which are not up to the standard required by this Company."

Modern Woodmen Picnic at Ashland.

The Modern Woodmen picnic and convention, to be held at Ashland on July 30th and 31st, promises to surpass any affair of that kind ever held in Northern Wisconsin.

The jurisdiction has been extended so as to take in all of the north half of the state.

The Ashland Woodman are sparing nothing to make it a decided success. Large prizes aggregating $1,000 will be given to bands, drill teams and to all kinds of sports.

Hoar Robert M. LaFollette and Hon. David S. Rose will be present and take part in the program.

During the time of the picnic the Ashland Elks hold their carnival and the famous Bostock-Ferrari Animal Show and Street Circus will be on the boards.

There will be about 10,000 people present.

Beside the band and drill contests, there will be excursions on Lake Superior, base ball games, log-rolling contests, games and sports for prizes, dances, and everything that goes to make a good time.

Woodmen and those desirous of attending should see their railroad agents and arrange for excursion trains.

Summer Train Between Chicago and Star Lake. A daily train of each of the Pioneer and United Lines, from Chicago to Star Lake, will leave Chicago on Sunday, July 14th, and return on Sunday, July 21st. The train will leave Chicago at 10:00 a. m. and arrive at Star Lake at 4:00 p. m. The train will be composed of the Pioneer Limited, east, and the Star Lake Limited, west, and will be operated by the Chicago and North Western Railway Company.

Why He Succeeds.

We are just in receipt of the annual catalogue of the Toland universities. It contains the most positive proof of excellence ever offered by any business college with which we are acquainted. To begin with, it contains the portraits of between five hundred and one thousand young people whom Mr. Toland has educated and sent to desirable positions. It also contains commendatory letters from some of the largest firms in the United States who now have in their employ Mr. Toland's graduates. The fact that any young man or woman is qualified to fill a position in actual business is a commendation for the school, but Mr. Toland goes further, he proves the excellence of his schools not by citing a single student in the employ of a firm or corporation, but by giving the portraits, positions occupied, by hundreds upon hundreds of his graduates. To illustrate, the Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. of South Bend, Ind., employs six of his graduates; the Great Northern R. R., twenty-two; Jno. Gund Brewing Co., fifteen; and hundreds of other institutions from two to five each. Further than this responsible persons attest that the demand for Mr. Toland's graduates is always in excess of the supply. To those desiring a business education no school offers as many and valuable inducements as the Toland universities and none stand so high in the estimation of those who have investigated their many advantages.

Mr. Toland is now the largest owner of business college property in the world, owning and operating schools at La Crosse and Wausau, Wis., Winona and Fairmont, Minn., Mason City and Oelwein, Iowa. A letter addressed to any of these cities, preferably La Crosse, will secure for those interested his catalogue, which in addition to containing the information desired by students is, typographically, a work of art.

Catarrah Cannot Be Cured

with local application, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrah Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrah. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, price 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Are Here.

—The Superior Palmistry company, who have created quite a sensation throughout the entire country, are here, and will be open for business at their parlors on Front street, opposite Hasbrouck's livery stable, on Thursday. They come with flattering testimonials from our surrounding cities. During their one week's stay in Janesville they gave 837 readings; Beaver Dam, 753; Ft. Atkinson, 653, and last week in Sparta they gave 742 readings and many people will endorse the statement that Prof. Spahr has never been equalled as a delineator of character. He can manipulate his science so that he can convince the most skeptical person that he knows more about you than you know or care to have any one else know.

Notice of Application.

Wood County Court—In Probate. STATE OF WISCONSIN, ss. County of Wood.

In the matter of the Estate of Henry Bates, deceased. On this 14th day of June, A. D. 1902, upon reading and filing the petition of George Bates of the County of Wood, State of Wisconsin, stating that Henry Bates of the County of Wood, died testate, on or about the 29 day of February, 1902, and praying that George Bates be appointed administrator of the estate of said deceased.

It is Ordered, That said application be heard before me, at the probate office in the city of Grand Rapids, on the 15th day of July, A. D. 1902, and that notice of the time and place appointed for hearing said application be given in all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order for three weeks successively in the Grand Rapids Tribune, a newspaper published in said county, previous to the time appointed for said hearing.

By the Court. W. J. Foxway, County Judge.

—The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear. That is precisely the manner in which Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has gained its reputation as a cure for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Every bottle that has ever been put out by the manufacturers has been fully up to the high standard of excellence claimed for it. People have found that it can always be depended upon for the relief and cure of these ailments and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co. and Wood County Drug Co.

Greene's Infalible Liniment

has often proved "a friend indeed" to the boys in blue. For Sprained Joints or Sore Muscles and every description of Cuts, Wounds, Burns, Scalds, Sore Feet or Strained Tendons it is just what its name implies—infalible.

In cases of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica and Lumbago it affords instant relief. As an emergency remedy for all the hurts of childhood and daily life it is unequalled, and all prudent mothers and housewives keep it handy. It is a powerful antiseptic and blood poisoning is impossible under its use.

Mr. Judd E. Bisbey, Chicago, says:
"I have kept your liniment in my house. It has in all instances proven satisfactory to my family and myself."

Price 25c, 50c, and $1.00 per bottle.
If your druggist cannot supply you,
the makers, J. W. Greene & Co., Chicago, will, to prove its worth, send a large free sample in return for this

Frank Stahl left on Monday for Sheboygan, where he attends the state convention of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin which convenes on the 14th and lasts until the 17th instant.

Professor Spahr of Washington, D.
C., palmist, has rented a building on the east side and will remain in the city one week reading the palms of those who take an interest in this sort of thing.

The brick walk in front of the court house building has at last been got under way and will soon be finished, much to the relief of pedestrians who have been compelled to use this thoroughfare of late.

—When you awake in the morning feeling like the end of a mispent life, your mouth full of fire and your soul full of regrets, take Rocky Moun-

W. G. Scott, G. W. Mason and Otto
evening to be on the ground Monday morning to take in the tournament of the Tomah gun club which occurred in that city Monday and Tuesday.

It was reported during the past week that an old bear and two cubs had been seen on the west side one night. It is not known whether the idea was caused by the excessive heat or by an overdose of river water.

J. C. Willard, agent at the Northwestern depot, returned from Chicago on Saturday. He reports very little doing in the freight business in the windy city, but thinks matters will be straightened out in the near future.

Women will be able to vote at the fall election in Wisconsin, according to a decision just rendered by Attorney General Hicks. Their votes, however, will be confined to the constitutional amendment regarding raising the salary of the state superintendent of schools and the change in the time of electing that official from the general to the spring election. On these questions, which deal solely with school matters, the attorney general says the women have a right to register their votes.

Sections of Rudolph were visited by a heavy rain and hail storm on Sunday afternoon, and considerable damage was done by the hail in places.
There were also indications of a rain here, but hardly enough moisture fell to lay the dust.

—Have your eyes tested at the optical store of A. P. Hirzy and you will get satisfaction if you are troubled with any kind of failing eyesight.
The latest instruments manufactured are used by him and he is prepared to correct any trouble in the vision.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Mackinnon entertained a party of girls at their home on French street on Thursday afternoon and evening for Ruth Weller of Fond du Lac, who was visiting with Helen and Mildred Mackinnon. The little ones reported a very good time.

—If you want to be comfortable during the heated term buy a quick mical range from the Centuria Hardware company and you will bless the day that you invested. Every thing that can be found at a first class hardware store is kept here.

Adolph Kneusel of Stevens Point, the man who intends to build a brewery here, was in the city on Monday.
He reports that he has not decided on which site he will use for his brewery, having the choice of two, but that the matter will probably be settled in 2 short time now.

—When you wake up with a bad taste in your mouth, go at once to Johnson & Hill Co.'s or Wood County
Drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One or two doses will make you well. They also cure biliousness, sick headache and constipation.

F. A. Cady started on the erection of a new house on his place last week, and he expects to erect a building very much like the one already on the premises. The property is situated on the corner of Oak and Milwaukee streets, and was recently purchased from C. J. Jacobson.

The Portage Daily Register gave our band some very substantial praise for the music they produced at the Dells on Sunday, and although there were two other bands in attendance, the Grand Rapids band came in for the bulk of the compliments.

John O'Day of Merrill was a business visitor in the city yesterday and today. Mr. O'Day came down from Minoqua where he has been engaged in logging operations, the output being sawed in the mill of the Grand Rapids Lumber company in this city.

—Don't be persuaded into taking something said to be "just as good" as Madison Medicine Co.'s Rocky Mountain Tea. There is nothing like it.
35 cts., no more no less. Johnson &
Hill Co.

Mrs. E. A. Upham and daughter left on Friday to be absent about two weeks visiting with relatives at Greenwood and Marshallfield. Mrs. H. C.
Hicks and granddaughter Idelle, who tional church in this city some time next week, the exact date to be given later.

—Get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets at Johnson & Hill Co.'s or Wood County drug store. They are easier to take and more pleasant in effect than pills.
Then their use is not followed by constipation as is often the case with pills. Regular size, 25c. per box.

John Bell, T. J. Cooper, LaFayette
Porter, H. Wiperman, F. S. Woodworth, Claus Johnson and Theron Lyon left on Tuesday for Madison, where they will attend the republican state convention as delegates. Richard Wiperman also accompanied them as a spectator.

—The most intelligent and historical elephant on earth is Pooh-Bah, who ambles gracefully every day with the most beautiful women in the world, arrayed in queenly robes, sitting on a throne attached to the elephant's back in the great Sells-Downs parade.
The Big Show will not be in Grand Rapids until Tuesday July 22.

Bert Brown received a letter from a friend at Dawson, N. D., on Saturday in which that gentleman offered to buy the hay from Mr. Brown's farm, offering him 50 cents a load for same.
This is considered a good price out in that country but it would paralyze a farmer if he had to sell hay at that figure here.

A. P. Hirzy the optician has received a new instrument for the testing of eyes which is a great improvement over anything of the kind that has heretofore been invented. It is called an ophthalmoscope and retinoscope, and is just what the name signifies, being for testing the muscular condition of the eyes as well as the retina.
With its aid the use of a dark room is entirely done away with, and as it can be placed on an ordinary table, it necessarily proves of great service to an optician.

—The King of Siam owns an army corps of 500 elephants, all well trained for military purposes, and under the command of a General. The smartest of these pachyderms was sold recently to J. M. J. Kane, General Foreign Agent of the Great Sells-Downs Shows and performs daily in one of the rings.
The Big Show will not be in Grand Rapids until Tuesday July 22.

—Money to loan. C. E. Boles.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Wood returned on Thursday last from Milwaukee, where they had spent a few days.
While in Milwaukee Mrs. Wood met with a mishap that might easily have proven fatal, but from which she luckily escaped with only a few bruises. Mr. and Mrs. Wood had alighted from a car in front of the Plankinton House and when she attempted to cross the street she was struck by a car coming from the opposite direction. The lady was knocked to the pavement but luckily escaped without any broken bones.
Mr. Wood was with his wife, but being a few feet behind was not struck by the car.

MARRIED BUT NOT MATED

"Dare! Strange word, madame. Do you intend to defy your husband? My good friend here can do what he pleases within and without the Court once he is the ostensible possessor. Perhaps when you think the matter calmly over you will come to the conclusion that it would be more advantageous to reside there yourself, painful as its associations may be."

She looked at the face of her antagonist. For one instant her courage seemed to fail; for one instant the light and strength and defiance faded out of her face, and her voice broke forth in a woman's last resource—appeal.

"What harm have I ever done to you, she cried pitiously, "that you should persecute me thus?"

"Madame," he said, with a low bow, "I do not persecute you. Far from it. I am but an instrument of Fate, and I would advise you for the best, if you would only allow me. But, like so many of your charming sex, you are impetuous, you are self-willed, you will not listen to reason. You have chosen to look upon me as an enemy; you will not believe that I am your friend."

"No," she interrupted, with a return of the old indignation, the old proud defiance, "your friendship, Count Savona, is little less dangerous than your enmity."

She moved away unsteadily, in an odd, dazed fashion, like one in a dream. Indeed, in looking back in the after days, this evil did seem to her like a dream—an evil one enough, with a nightmare-like horror attending upon it that filled her mind with terror.

The Count followed her to the door.

"I will see you down the stairs," he said, politely.

She shuddered, and drew back as if he were some noxious thing.

"No," she cried, impulsively. "There is no need. I—I mean I have a cab waiting."

"Very well, madame," he said, and bowed, and returned to the room, leaving her to make her way alone down the dark and narrow stairs.

As she reached the first landing something dark and shadowy seemed to shrink back into its gloomiest corner; something that in her perturbed state of mind she scarcely noted. She reached the outer door, and for a moment stood alone on the threshold, while the rain fell in plashing, noisy sheets, and the wind moaned and whistled around the dreary houses, and the dreary street.

The driver, sitting shivering on his box, noted that hesitation, that upward glance at the windows, that utter indifference to the discomfort of the elements, so significant of a preoccupied mind. And some one else noted it, a solitary figure, bronzed and worn-looking—passing through the street. Perhaps the fact of his so noticing it, or some instinct or impulse impossible to define, stayed his hurrying steps, and led him to approach the door and the grumbling driver.

He laid his hand on the handle to open the door for the lady—he felt she was a lady even before the low sweet voice murmured scarce conscious thanks for the service done. Something in that voice seemed to startle him as he heard it. He leant forward eagerly.

"It is—it can't be. Why, yes—it it isn't the blessed little gentleman's mother?"

"Tom!" she cried, and her hands went out to seize his own, and her white face looked up to him in the flickering lamp-light. "Tom, is it really you? Here—"

"It is, ma'am. Here I am back again, like a bird flitting, and after such a fight for dear life with those Mexican savages as never a soldier in this here blessed old England ever dreams of."

"And—and your master?" she faltered, wondering why all that mountain of trouble seemed to be rolled from her heart and her life, at the bare thought of the proximity of that one most faithful friend.

"My master's very ill, ma'am," said Tom gravely. "It was just life and death, and those foreigners they didn't know what to do with him, and none of them could fetch the bullet out, and some say it's in his lungs, and some it's in his shoulder, and some it's in his side. And so, one day they says to me, 'Take him to England,' and what with prize money and one thing or another, I scraped enough for his passage, and I worked my own, and—well, here we are."

"And you've been with him always—you've never left him all these years—you good, faithful Tom!"

She was weeping now, weeping softly and unrestrainedly in this mingled gladness and sorrow that had come to her.

"Of course, I've been with him, ma'am. You told me as how nothing I could do to serve you would be half as much to you as if I was a true friend to Mr. Grant, and I'd lay down my life for him, ma'am, that I would—cheerful—any moment that would serve him."

"I'm sure you would, Tom—oh, I'm sure you would!"

She was sobbing so passionately that it hurt him to hear her, and the impatient cabman growled out an interjection to know how much longer he was to wait.

"Don't take on so, ma'am, don't," entreated Tom. "Mr. Grant is sure to live. He's stronger than you think, and I'll write to you, ma'am, if you'd like to hear, and tell you how he gets on, and—"

"Yes, do, Tom—do," she cried, dashing the tears away from her eyes. "And look here—"

She thrust a handful of gold and silver into his hands. "Take that, Tom. You must—indeed, you must, and get him medicine, wine—anything he needs. He won't know and he won't question; but, oh, Tom, he mustn't die—my last friend, my only friend. Oh, heaven will not be so cruel as to take him from me!"

"No, ma'am, not a bit of it," said Tom, cheerfully; "he ain't a-goin' to die, never you fear. And now, where am I to tell this growing old idiot, who's so afraid of wetting his precious clothes, to drive you?"

"The Charing Cross Hotel," she said,

and Tom touched his hat and withdrew from the cab window, and made a mental note of the address, little dreaming how soon and how strangely that scene was to be recalled to his memory.

Meanwhile, in that dusky, dreary room upstairs, the two men were congratulating themselves on the success of their schemes. It was close upon midnight when the Count rose to say good night.

The solitary occupant of the room looked away his papers, paused a moment or two to make some entries in his memorandum book, then drew his chair near to the fire, and bent over it, rubbing his cold, thin hands together for warmth.

"A hard fight," he muttered to himself, "a hard fight; but I've got the best of it, after all. I never feared a woman yet, and I'm not to be beaten by one—no, not the cleverest, or the—"

What checked the sentence on his lips? What suddenly seemed to chill his blood like ice, and stop the beating of heart and pulse in one second's space of deadly fear? He had heard no sound of opening door, or approaching footsteps, yet something was certainly standing behind him. The firm, nervous pressure of a hand was upon his shoulder. As his eye rested on that hand, he seemed to recognize in its brown, lean, slender fingers a sentence of doom long threatened and long defied, yet never, even amidst such defiance, quite forgotten, or quite unfeared.

There was a moment's breathless silence, yet a moment that seemed to hold an eternity of memory in its brief pause. The candles burning on the table had burned down so low that their sudden extinction was scarce perceptible, and in the deserted street the rising wind gave one long, sad moan like the last cry of a suffering soul. Was it echoed by another, or was it only fancy that repeated it?

The darkness and quietness of the room had scarcely been disturbed by sound or struggle. The paralysis of fear that held that silent figure in its grasp, nerveless and immovable, seemed to hold it there still. Only it no longer leaned towards the fire, but lay back in its chair with ashy face and wide and staring eyes, and on the bare wood floor something fell with a monotonous, dripping sound.

The room is full of shadows. Has one of them life, that it moves so stealthily through its darkest corners to the door? So light it is, and so noiseless in its movements, that neither sound nor echo betrays its presence.

The room is dark and quiet as ever; the night falls with storm and rain over the great city beyond; but once again, like plying things, the shadows close around that solitary figure which now is voiceless, powerless as themselves.

CHAPTER XX.

The sun has broken fairly forth, and driven away the rain clouds, and over the London streets and London houses he pours out his beams in a perfect flood of radiance.

He pours them, too, on all the dingy, dusky houses around Lincoln's Inn Fields, making them look only darker and dingier by reason of such generosity, and the bound rays fit hither and thither, and peep through cobwebbed windows and play at hide-and-seek in mysterious passages, and seem to mock the frowning houses that look so close and grave and dismal, as if they were standing tombstones of men's secrets and men's lives, as perhaps they are.

And following the sunbeams comes the old crane who has charge of the chambers, and looks after her solitary lodger. She comes in armed with brooms and brushes and goes to the window and draws up the blind and in rush the sunbeams like live things at play and race and chase each other through the room, in very mockery of what their presence brings to light.

The old woman does nothing, to the chamber that day; but the brooms and brushes fall with a hideous clatter, and the quiet house and the quiet street seem alive in a moment with shrieks of terror and tread of feet.

The news spreads far and wide; spreads only by the utterance of one hideous whispered word—a word that carries its own weight of terror along with it—a word that travels far and near throughout that day and brings investigation, surprise, questions, wonder, all in its train, and so leads on from point to point, from theory to theory, from evidence to proof, shadowy and impalpable at first, but growing and strengthening and widening the circle of its condemnatory history as a pebble thrown into still water widens the circle whence it first touched that water's surface.

The majesty of the law is at work again on behalf of John Marsden, and the mighty engine works faster and surer now than it did, or seemed to do, when he was a living man to benefit—not a dead man to be avenged. At the close of the previous day the living man had sat in his solitary chamber brooding over the wealth and prosperity in store for him; the close of this day sees only a dumb, helpless form lying stark and straight upon its narrow couch, over whom no tears are shed, no loving memories cherished, and whose fate will be briefly summed up by a coroner's jury.

This was the evidence collected by the intelligent member of the force, X 57, after the discovery of the body by the old woman who attended on John Marsden:

First, that the body had been stabbed in the back; second, that the wound had been caused by some long and narrow instrument—probably a dagger; third, that the deceased had been visited in his rooms the evening of the murder by two people—a man and a woman—the man a foreigner, who was in the habit of coming very frequently to see the deceased; the woman, a stranger, closely muffled, who came in a cab, stayed for some quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, and then went away in the same cab.

The intelligent member of the force had picked up his ears at the sound of a foreigner—it stirred in with the dagger wound. A burglar or a robber would not have had such a weapon in his possession; the intelligent, therefore, made a note of this and proceeded to act upon his suspicions. The name of this foreigner? The woman did not know and never heard it, to her knowledge—knew he was a foreigner because he looked like one—had overheard her master call him Count.

The Count is found. He is shocked; he is grieved. He is desolated and astounded at the awful occurrence. Inwardly in a very raging fury of baffled wrath and vengeance. All his schemes to end thus! His carefully planned, his beautifully arranged project to be foiled at the very moment of completion! Ah, could all the oaths in the Italian language, or any other language he knew, relieve his feelings or chain back the demoniacal rage in his breast? He tried them inwardly as a sedative. But he was outwardly very calm, very dignified, very collected. His evidence was the most important yet brought forward.

The wife of the deceased called on her husband at his rooms on the evening of the 16th of January. She came to bring some papers necessary to the establishment of her claim to this property—papers she had hitherto refused to produce. She and her husband were disputing violently when witness came on the scene. Subject of dispute? The husband asked his wife to return to him, and she refused to do so.

How did the dispute end?

The wife made use of some threats and left, still declaring her resolve that she would not return and live under her husband's roof—unless forced to do so.

They telegraphed to Vaux Abbey for Mrs. Marsden's address. Answer prepaid. More delay—more conjectures. The intelligent keeps still that watchful guard over the foreign Count, convinced in his own mind that he is deeper than ever. In the course of time a telegram arrives from Vaux Abbey: "Mrs. Marsden is at the Charing Cross Hotel."

Messenger dispatched to Charing Cross Hotel. Returns with Mrs. Marsden, to whom the intelligence has been communicated. How does she behave? No scene, no tears, no hysterics. Only a sad-faced, quiet woman, who hears what is required of her, and answers all questions asked, readily and composedly.

Verdict found: "Wilful murder, against some person or persons unknown."

SAME RACE AS OF OLD.

Leaders of Crusades Would Be "Captains of Industry" To-Day.

To-day we are the same race, with the same impulse, the same power, and because there is no longer a frontier to absorb our surplus of energy, because there is no longer a wilderness to conquer, and because we still must march, still must conquer, we remember the old days when our ancestors before us found the outlet for their activity checked, and rebelling, turned their faces eastward, and went down to invade the old world. So we. No sooner have we found that our path to the westward has cooled than, reacting eastward, we are at the old world again, marching against it, invading it, devoting our surplus of energy to its subjugation.

But, though we are the same race, with the same impulses, the same blood-instincts as the old Frisian marsh people, we are now come into a changed time and the great work of our century is no longer war but trade.

Or, if you choose, it is only a different word for the same race-characteristic. The desire for conquest—say what you will—was as big in the breast of the most fervid of the crusaders as it is this very day in the most peacefully disposed of American manufacturers. Had the Lion-Hearted Richard lived to-day he would have become a "leading representative of the Amalgamated Steel companies" and doubt not for one moment that he would have underbid his Manchester rivals in the matter of bridge girders.

Had Andrew Carnegie been alive at the time of the preachings of Peter the Hermit, says Frank Norris, in the World's Work, he would have raised a company of gens d'armes sooner than all of his brothers-in-arms, would have equipped his men better and more effectively, would have been first on the ground before Jerusalem, would have built the most ingenious siege engine and have hurled the first cask of Greek-fire over the walls.

Ammonia Over a Telephone.

"Well," said Druggist Henry Happ a few days ago, "I have heard people call up places over the telephone and ask to 'see' certain parties, but that isn't a marker to what I heard yesterday. A woman came into my store and, stepping to the telephone, called up a Mrs. Isaacs, on one of the hilltops. While she was talking, my clerk, who was cleaning some bottles, poured a lot of ammonia upon a sponge and the odor filled the store."

"Imagine my surprise when I heard the woman at the telephone exclaim: 'Mrs. Isaacs, are you cleaning house?' There was an interval for the answer, which was followed by the woman saying: 'Why, I thought you was, I can smell ammonia so strong.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Humane Work in Porto Rico.

One of the natural results of the introduction of American authority in Porto Rico appears in an active movement for the prevention of cruelty to animals. In San Juan, Ponce and smaller communities the beating of horses has been vigorously discouraged, and the last measure enacted at the recent session of the legislative assembly was an act to prohibit cock fighting.

Usury of Moscow Resident.

In Moscow a money lender, the owner of several houses and stables, was sentenced recently to four months' imprisonment for lending money at the enormous rate of 182 per cent.

FARMERS' CORNER.

An Automatic Tank Valve.

Regulating the flow of water into troughs and tanks is something which causes farmers more or less anxiety and trouble. In the plan as illustrated, the water pipe enters near the top of the tank, which places the valve out of water, thus relieving it of all danger from rust or the collection of sediment. Such a valve may be bought at any hardware store. The pipe may enter nearer the bottom of the tank and if the valve is kept clear the device will still serve its purpose. Another point in its favor is that, if desired, the valve can be closed just as effectively when the tank is one-fourth full as when filled to the brim.

The lower half of the long, jointed lever connecting the valve and float has a shorter one attached to it. The upper end of the latter having a number of holes in it. By having a hole in the upper half of the jointed lever and using a pin, the angle at the joint can be changed at will. Making it as large as possible will necessitate the float being lifted near the top of the tank before the valve is entirely closed, but by decreasing the angle the valve will be closed, while the float is still near the bottom. A sealed can or bottle makes a good float. A board or block of wood soon becomes soaked, and in consequence its lifting power is greatly diminished.—A. L. Williams, in Farm and Home.

To Prevent Soil Washing.

Soil washing, to a greater or less extent, takes place on 75 per cent of rolling farms, according to one writer. Where it occurs the very best surface soil is washed into the valleys, leaving the bare and much less productive clay on higher land. As a certain portion of all farms must be kept under grass it is advisable to allow steep inclines to remain in blue grass or some form of meadow. Such places furnish a good location for trees. These will not only prevent washing, but will tend to modify the climate by affording protection to stock and checking the heavy winds at all seasons of the year. In any case these slopes furnish excellent sheep pasture so that the land may be made quite as profitable as any that is under the plow. Where it is necessary to cultivate hillsides it is a good plan to plow under coarse manure, as this will prevent washing. In some instances it may be necessary to throw brush into the gullies and stake it down.—Iowa Homestead.

Feed Trough for Young Pigs.

One of the difficulties in feeding young pigs is seeing that each has a fair share of the slop. At the ordinary trough the stronger pigs will drive the weaker ones off and they fail to get enough food to keep up their growth. A trough designed to accommodate eight small pigs is eight-cornered and is made of inch lumber. The sides slant about as those of the ordinary Y trough. A spout is fastened in the middle, into which the slop is poured, which runs down into the trough. To make this trough first construct a bottom sixteen inches in diameter. Nail two-by-four pieces around the bottom and use ten-inch boards for the sides, nailing them securely. No. 12 wire is stapled around the top and also around the outside, about three inches down from the top. Nail stout braces from the center spout, about seven inches from the bottom, up to every other corner of the trough, making four braces and giving between each room for two small pigs to feed. Indianapolis News.

What Pays?

The cows on many farms would be considered first-class producers if each cow's product amounted to 290 pounds of butter per year, yet it is claimed by some of the best dairymen that 290 pounds of butter per year from a cow does not pay. Those who aim to make the most butter from their herds have the standard up to 300 pounds per year, and some fix the limit higher. Every farmer can have the individual members of his herd reach that amount by breeding for better cows every year.

When Horses Bolt Their Food.

Horses that are greedy and inclined to bolt their food should be fed grain in a wide bottomed manger, and even then it is well to place a few large pebbles in the bottom the size of a man's fist or larger. This compels slower eating and secures better mastication.

Propagating Grape Vines.

To layer a grapevine to obtain new vines to set of some choice variety, let a branch run until there can be about six feet of it placed on the ground. Then pinch off the end, which will throw the growth into the buds along the cane. When these are well under way place it in the soil about two or three inches deep in a trench about four inches deep. In a few weeks the trench may be filled level with the surface. By fall there will be roots from every joint, and they may be separated from the parent stem and from one another and transplanted where they are wanted. This is less trouble and more sure than growing them from slips, which should be cut in the fall after the leaves drop, and beeled in. The tops incline toward the north, at some place where they will be sheltered and not molested during the winter. If well-ripened wood of this year's growth is used, and one or two buds left above ground, with another below, most of them will be found to have rooted in the spring. If one has but a parent vine of a good sort, or can get the branches that his neighbor cuts off when he cuts back in the fall, he can soon start a vineyard at no cost but a little labor.—American Cultivator.

To Kill Cabbage Worms.

One who knows says that hot water at 140 degrees applied with a sprinkler will kill the worms and will not hurt the plants. But be careful not to apply it at a temperature much higher than 140 degrees. The condition of the wind and weather at the time and the distance the water travels from the sprinkler to the cabbage all must be considered. It is possible to cook the cabbage with water at 150 degrees, and it is possible to use water at 200 degrees without damage. Paris green and London purple can be successfully and safely used in fighting cabbage worms. The best way to apply these impalpable powders is to put one part of Paris green or one and a half parts of London purple to 100 parts of flour and dust it on. For this purpose a dust sprayer is convenient. For small gardens an insect powder sprayer is the thing. There is no danger from these poisons, as the leaves dusted are not the ones eaten. They should not be used on plants used as greens.—Farmers' Guide.

Keep the Cow's Tail Clean.

The simple device here illustrated can be used in nearly every cow stable to keep the tails clean and prevent the cows from switching during milking in fly time. A piece of heavy cord, with a loop in each end, is fastened above the cow at a and the other end slipped around her tail as shown. When she lies down, this will keep her tail out of the gutter and filth. When about to milk, hang the cord over a beam or hook at b, which will pull the tail above barn's way.—New England Homestead.

Killing Peach Tree Borers.

For the last eight years I have set peach trees every year, and I never fail to make a thorough application of the tar. With an old paint brush I put it upon the trunk of the trees before setting, spreading the tar from the roots up the trunk from eight to twelve inches. I am careful to remove any borers that may be in the trees, as they come from the nursery. I keep in mind this fact that the coal tar will not kill the borer, deeply buried under the bark, but will prevent the moth from depositing its eggs at the base of the tree. The application of the tar must be made annually thereafter, being sure to finish the work before the moth begins to fly, which I believe is from June 1 to 15, usually. In making these annual applications it is necessary, to insure success, that the earth be removed down to the roots. The bark from the roots up eight to twelve inches must be completely covered with the tar.

In case the tree is suffering from the effects of the shot-hole borer or fruit-bark beetle, I know of nothing that is equal to the coal tar as a remedy. In case of mechanical injury to a tree the tar is better than any paint or wash we have ever tried.—O. J. Farmer.

Tar Preparations for Mange.

A bulletin from the Nebraska experiment station strongly advocates dipping with coal tar preparations to cure mange in cattle. The author claims that the liberal use of dips will lessen abortion in range cattle, which, he holds, is often due to weakness resulting from mange.

Agricultural Notes.

Muskneton blight has become troublesome in some localities.

In cultivating onions care should be taken not to work the soil to the bulbs or to kill them.

In seeding sour field land to timothy lime should be thoroughly worked into the soil before the seed is sown.

For late strawberry crops a northern exposure, clay soil and late varieties are recommended by the New Jersey station.

How long to keep a cow depends upon her work. Age should be given no consideration as long as the old cows are giving a profit.

All varieties of grapes may be propagated by layering, and many, like Norton Cynthiana, Scuppernon and other hard wooded aestivalis varieties, cannot easily be propagated otherwise.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS.

Rhubarb Cream.

Take two pounds of green rhubarb which has been peeled and cut into small pieces, put into a saucepan with three cups of water and cook until it is soft enough to mash into a pulp; strain through a fine sieve and measure; to every pound of fruit add a pound of sugar and stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved, then boil for twenty minutes. Put an ounce of gelatine to soak in a cupful of cold cream, and when soft dissolve over hot water. Let it cool, add the cream and juice of one lemon, stirring constantly, and turn into a glass or earthen mold and place in a cold place to set for at least two hours; serve with whipped cream or a compote of figs, prunes or oranges.

Shredded Codfish Cakes.

The shredded codfish put up in tin boxes is a blessing to those who dislike the annoyance of preparing the fish in the old-fashioned manner. Take half of a one-pound can of the shredded fish and wash in two waters, then cover with a liberal quantity of warm water and let stand for half an hour; squeeze out the water, separate the particles of fish, and add to it half a pound of warm mashed potatoes. Whip these together lightly, add a saltspoonful of white pepper, two ounces of butter, and the yolks of two eggs well beaten; work all together, and with floured hands shape the mixture into dainty little cakes; drop them in smoking hot fat and fry to a golden color.—Cook.

Salad.

One way of using up scraps of cold meat is to take small quantities of chopped beef, ham or veal and potatoes. Mix the meat and potatoes together and season with salt, pepper and mustard and a small onion chopped fine. Take the yolk of three hard-boiled eggs to a medium-sized dish of salad and mash them fine. Mix a spoonful of melted butter and half a cup of vinegar with them, then mix through the meat. Pile on a salad dish and garnish with the whites of the eggs cut in rings.

Spanish Mackerel.

Broil the mackerel on both sides; place it on a hot platter and make the following sauce: Beurre Noir—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; when melted add one tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Boil up once and turn over the fish.

Chicken Jelly.

A young chicken nicely prepared, cut up into small pieces, put in a saucepan with three pints of water, cooked rather slowly, removing the grease from the top continually. Allow it to cook for about five and a half hours, season to taste with salt, pepper, celery and parsley; when finished, stand aside to cool for some hours, then skim the grease off the top and serve either hot or cold.

Creamed Potatoes.

Cut cold boiled potatoes into small dice. Cover them with milk and boil up once or twice. Season with pepper, salt and butter. Remove to one side and thicken with a little flour and water. Creamed potatoes may also be prepared by first boiling the small squares, then turning the milk on while they are hot, and continuing in the same way as above.

Taffy.

One pound of Demerara sugar, five ounces of fresh butter, one dessertspoonful of vinegar or the juice of a lemon. Put into an enameled pan on a clear slow fire and stir constantly. Let it boil about ten minutes; then pour a little on a wetted plate, and if it hardens quickly it is done. Pour into shallow dishes or tins which have been wetted with cold water.

Preserved Cherries.

Cherries may be preserved either with or without the stones. Many think the stones add to the flavor. To each pound of cherries allow one-third of a pound of sugar. Put the sugar in the kettle with half a pint of water to three pounds of sugar; stir until it is dissolved; when boiling add the cherries and cook three minutes. Then put in the jars.

Brief Suggestions.

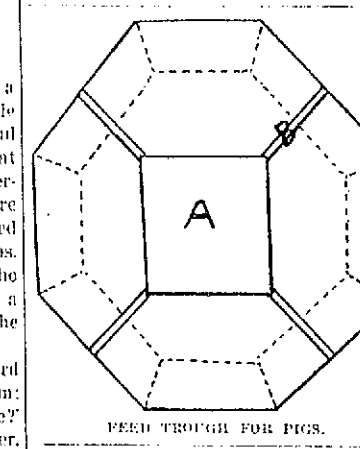

Tough meat can be made tender by laying it a few minutes in vinegar before it is cooked.

When a candle—wax, sperm or paraffin—is too large to put on the candlestick, dip the end in hot water for a few moments, to melt down to the required size.

When ironing, remember to rub the hot iron lightly over a piece of ordinary yellow soap, and the clothes will look much nicer and the work will be done much quicker.

Fruit stains may be removed from linen as follows: Tie up some cream of tartar in the stained part and let it boil in soapsuds for a few minutes. Then wash and rinse in clear water and the stain will be gone.

To clean rusty irons have a little salt and a little beeswax tied up separately in a bit of cloth and rub the iron first with the one containing salt, then with the beeswax. This should be done each time the irons are heated for use and the ironing will be better and more quickly done in consequence.

RUDOLPH.

(Too late for last week.)

The Catholic school gave a grand entertainment on the third of July. Four pupils graduated, they being George Blair, Mary Reusch, Anna Johanson and Josie Johanson.

Everybody get ready for there will be another big dance the 18th, given by Johnny Hassell and Benny Benson. Ice cream and lemonade will be served at Mr. Logan's.

C. Daly has a number of men working on his farm, making hay. The hay is so thick and heavy that they get a big load out of four cocks of hay.

Will Deukie, who has spent the past six months in Milwaukee, returned home for the Fourth. He received a warm welcome from his many friends.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church met at Mrs. John Coulthart's Thursday afternoon. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Smith of Stevens Point were the guests of Mr. Ratelle and family last Saturday and Sunday.

Geo. Meed, Mr. La Baytoo and daughter Bell are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lavague.

Francis Lavague, who is employed at Chicago, was to see his parents last Friday and returned Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Akey drove to Junction City Sunday to see Mrs. Akey's sister, Mrs. Grasshorn.

Mrs. George Timian and son, Leslie, are visiting at the home of her brother, Frank Whitman.

Johnny Bates and daughter, Jennie, and George Cooper, Jr., spent their Fourth at Kaukauna.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant and Mr. and Mrs. Protteau spent the Fourth with Mr. and Mrs. Codere.

Henry Reimler took a trip down to Milwaukee, to be the guest of his sister, last Thursday.

Miss Laura Provost and Mrs. Frank Sharkey returned from a short visit at Tomahawk.

Mrs. Redlick spent the Fourth with her parents at New Lisbon, returning last Saturday.

Eddie Horner of Tomah will spend his summer vacation with his uncle, Mr. Logan.

Mr. Adams of your city was a caller at a number of homes Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. N. Ratelle is taking a vacation, visiting at Junction City and Stevens Point.

Mrs. John Granger has returned home from a few days' visit in your city.

Frank Matthews is engaged on the Slattery farm for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill are rejoicing over the birth of a baby girl.

Mrs. Alice of Kaukauna is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Cooper.

John Lindahl is the happy possessor of a new Osborne mower.

Mrs. Fred Logan was visiting her parents at Mather last week.

George Hamm was in this vicinity last Tuesday on business.

P. Keyzers was in Grand Rapids on business Wednesday.

Will Bratton of Minocqua was home to spend the Fourth.

Lem La Haie spent Sunday at the Whitman residence.

Pet Codere is at home this week.

On July 6th an interesting entertainment was given by the pupils of St. Joseph's Catholic school of Rudolph, at the closing of which diploma was sent by the county superintendent, Mr. Len, were presented to the following by Rev. A. Van Sever: Misses Anna and Josie Johnson, Mary Perch and Geo. Blair. After a salutatory spoken by the graduates, Miss Almira Blair delivered a very fine essay on "Virtue and Science." She also acquitted herself very creditably in taking the part of Aunt Peabody in a dialogue; so did the two Misses Jonsson and Emma Corner. The singing was very fine, too, the principal alto singers being the Misses Alice Akey and Mary Perch and Master Noel Crotteau. Some good comical pieces were spoken by Miss Josie Johnson and Masters Joe Vadnais and Raymond Crotteau. Miss Celia Vadnais delivered a very fine vaudeville, the subject being "The Rainbow." After this, about sixty premiums were distributed by Rev. A. Van Sever. He also gave a very fine speech. He said, in part, referring to a recitation that had been spoken, that we are all sculptors whose works may surpass the finest works of art, for we carve, not on inanimate marble, to which each day, each moment even, we may add new tints of beauty that will last for eternity. The school had done much for the graduates and young teachers, its education had given them a good start in life, but now it depended on themselves to continue and perfect the work.

Mrs. P. Keyzers departed Monday noon for Milwaukee, to be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. F. Phillips and Mrs. F. Steinfield of De Pere will tend to the house while she is absent.

Francis Granger of Stevens Point died on Sunday at his home in Stevens Point. He was the father of Mrs. Walter Reeve of this town. The funeral will be held on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horner of Tomah were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Logan the latter part of last week. Mr. Horner departed Monday, but Mrs. Horner will prolong her visit.

Dr. Loewe was up in this burg Tuesday, attending Mrs. Thomas Provost who was taken suddenly ill Monday night.

Miss Angeline Juncan and Mr. Ray of Sherry were united by marriage at 9 o'clock at the Catholic church.

Miss Laura Provost, Rose Ratelle and Angeline Juncan were in the city shopping on Saturday.

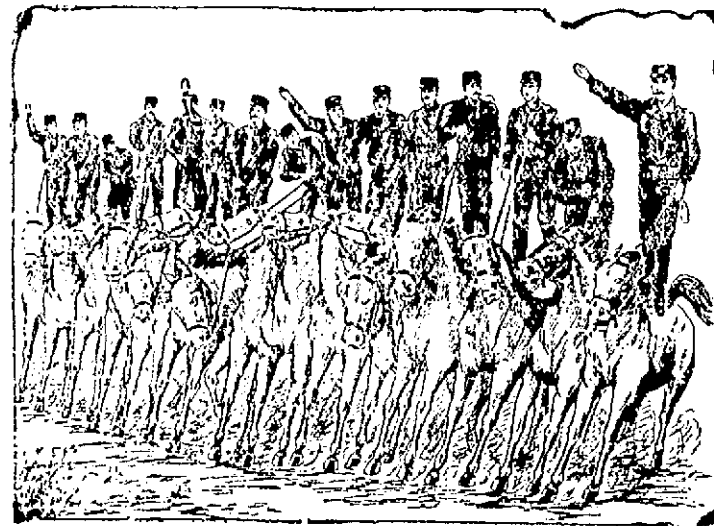

A heavy rain fell in this section on Sunday, accompanied by hail that did some damage.

Mr. Albee died last Friday morning at 9 o'clock. He was buried in Grand Rapids.

Wait for the Big Shows!

Coming to Grand Rapids, Tuesday July 22nd. THE SELLS & DOWNS

Great Shows Consolidated. Best on Earth.

CRANMOOR.

Tuesday afternoon witnessed the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and their Appleton and Clintonville guests and Mrs. Lafe Brooks of Grand Rapids for an extended trip down the Wisconsin river and Fox river. Two large boats were built for the party by Mr. B. R. Clinton, that surpass anything seen about here in convenience and completeness in every detail. That the anticipated pleasure will be fully realized is the wish of their home friends.

One of the pleasantest parties of the season was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett in honor of their visiting guests Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wright of Appleton and Dr. and Mrs. Willoughby of Clintonville, who arrived Friday for a few days' stay before embarking on the river trip. Mrs. Willoughby possesses elocutionary talent of rare merit and added much to the evening's pleasure by rendering several excellent selections.

Miss Maude Griffith of Grand Rapids, who formerly taught the north school, has been a visitor since Friday at the C. E. Lester home and renewing the acquaintance of Cranmoor friends. Miss Maude was among the out of town guests at the Saturday evening festivities.

Royal Nash of Grand Rapids visited his friend Roy Lester Saturday and was among the guests at Mr. Bennetts Saturday evening.

Misses Nellie Young, Nellie Fogarty and Katherine Galligan of Nekoosa were Sunday visitors of Miss Dorothy Fitch.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafe Brooks and daughters of Green Bay were in attendance at the Bennett party Saturday evening.

On Wednesday last Mrs. Cohn and Mr. Bick arrived from Wausau for their annual visit to their marsh holdings.

Miss Kittie Cahill came down from Grand Rapids Sunday and will remain some time at the Whittlesey home.

Chas. S. Whittlesey was a down passenger on the noon train Saturday for a visit at home till Monday.

Mrs. E. E. Warner, Lillian and Gillman returned from their Poysippi visit on Friday last.

Mr. J. B. Arpin, wife and friends of Grand Rapids paid a visit to Arpin marsh Tuesday last.

Roy Lester and his guest Royal Nash returned home Tuesday from a trip to City Point.

Mrs. W. H. Fitch and Miss Caroline were shopping at Grand Rapids Friday.

Miss Harlan of Mauston has been visiting her cousin Miss Myra Kruger.

Atty. J. A. Gaynor of Grand Rapids was down this way one day this week.

Harry Abrams was a caller at the Whittlesey home Friday.

C. E. Lester left for Madison on the noon train Tuesday.

H. F. Whittlesey spent Thursday last at Grand Rapids.

NEKOOSA.

The Nekoosa base ball nine went to the Dells on Sunday and played with the Portage team, the score being 18 to 0 in favor of Portage. The Nekoosa team was never so badly defeated.

Frank Gates of Wausau, who is employed in the mill, had the middle finger of his right hand taken off and the others badly bruised one day this week.

Mrs. W. T. Early and son Roy returned from Kaukauna on Monday after spending two weeks with relatives and friends.

Mrs. F. W. Burt, Lizzie Stahl and John Rise of Grand Rapids were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Burt on Tuesday.

Al Goltke of Star Lake has moved his family here. Mr. Goltke and family will make Nekoosa their future home.

The papermakers gave a chowder on Tuesday in honor of their guest, Mr. Sullivan of Grand Rapids.

A. E. Lapham and daughter, Nora, were in Grand Rapids Monday between trains.

Mrs. M. McStrack went to Grand Rapids Tuesday to spend the day with relatives.

Mrs. P. B. Monett of Duluth is the guest of her husband at the Sherman House.

Clara and Anna Schwartz of Milwaukee are guests of Miss Alma Bentz.

Al Menier of Grand Rapids was in this burg Tuesday on business.

Mrs. August Bentz droye to Grand Rapids Monday.

If a Man Lie to You,

And say some other salve, ointment, lotion, oil or alleged healer is as good as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, tell him thirty years of marvelous cures of Piles, Burns, Boils, Corns, Felons, Ulcers, Cuts, Scalds, Bruises and Skin Eruptions prove it's the best cheap. 25c at John E. Daly's drug store.

SIGEL.

The attendance at the annual school meeting in district No. 5 was quite large. Wm. Henke has been re-elected for treasurer. It was moved and carried to have eight months of school and to commence on the second Monday in October.

Mr. Hilderman has moved his house to a higher place on his farm and is now engaged in erecting a barn 34x64 feet.

Need More Help.

Often the over-taxed organs of digestion cry out for help by Dyspepsia's pains, Nausea, Dizziness, Headaches, liver complaints, bowel disorders. Such troubles call for prompt use of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are gentle, thorough and guaranteed to cure. 25c at John E. Daly's drug store.

BIRON.

The party consisting of Nettie Akey, Dora Crotteau and Messrs. Fisher and Sipes, who went to Chicago to spend the 4th, returned home on Monday, and report a good time.

Lightning struck the office at this place on Sunday, but very little damage was done, although at one time it was thought that the structure was on fire.

A piece of the road extending between the mill and Kempfert's farm has been graded, greatly improving that thoroughfare.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff DeMars, Mrs. O. Grandshaw and Mr. Ritchie made the trip to the Dells on Sunday and report a good time.

A. M. Akey has purchased a new kitchen range and is well pleased with the way it works.

SHERRY.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Becker drove to Marshfield Saturday after their son, Johnnie, who was at the hospital treating his bruised foot, and we are all glad to learn that it is somewhat better.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parks and daughter, Hazel, were at Milladore last Sunday, visiting Mr. Baker and family.

There was a farewell dance for Miss Marie Cline at the hall last Friday evening. All reported a nice time.

Miss Ella Rhode returned home last Saturday from East Troy, where she visited with old time friends.

The Sherry Presbyterians decided on the site north of the school house for their church.

We are all glad to see H. Whitney able to walk on our sidewalks without his crutches.

The Iverson and Olson families spent Sunday visiting Mr. Hanson at Rozellville.

Quite a number from here accompanied the ball players to Milladore last Sunday.

Mrs. J. Thomas and Mrs. N. M. Trussel spent a day at Grand Rapids lately.

Mrs. Frank Lusk is confined to bed on account of inflammatory rheumatism.

Miss Ethel Putney spent last Thursday visiting at Mr. Cowell's at Arpin.

We had quite a wind and rain storm here Monday, but it did no damage.

TEACHERS ARE HERE

SEVENTY-TWO AT INSTITUTE.

One of the Largest Gatherings of the Kind Ever Held in This City.

The summer school for Wood county convened at the Howe high school building on Monday morning and at this writing seventy-two teachers and others who have aspirations along that line are in attendance.

As usual on such occasions the great majority of those in attendance are ladies, there being only three gentlemen as regular scholars, although a number have visited the sessions from time to time.

The conductors are Miss Rosalia Bohrer of the Marathon county training school, Wausau, C. R. Thompson of the Richland county training school, G. O. Banting of the Augusta high school, and Otto J. Leu, our county superintendent.

The sessions open every morning at 8:30 o'clock and last until 12, and in the afternoon school opens at 2 and closes at 4 o'clock. All registering are supposed to attend regularly in order to be counted as pupils and receive the benefits of the school.

The conductors report that up to date the sessions have been running along smoothly and all seem to take great interest in the work. Among the new branches that those in attendance are preparing themselves in are Agriculture, American and English literature, English history and English composition. This fall the examination of applicants for certificates will include these branches so that it is very necessary for teachers to prepare themselves accordingly.

The summer schools for teachers are not only becoming more popular every year, but owing to the increased efficiency demanded by school officers, teachers find the work very beneficial in aiding them to improve their standing in branches that may have been more or less difficult for them at former examinations.

Among those in attendance are Lillian Berard, Clara Youskow, Ada Potter, Mollie McGloin, Jennie Berard, Lettie Dickson, Katie Harmon, Clara Johnson, Elizabeth Rowland, Edith Heiser, Edna Heiser, Alf. Berard, Cleave Akey, Jennie Raath, Eva Nisson, Nellie Ward, Jessie Smith, Ida Halvorsen, Belle Harding, Laura Lemley, Susie Granger, Emma Johnson, H. A. Pables, Isabel Akey, Amelia Weisenborn, Almira Blain, Minnie Sullivan, Hanna Rasmussen, Nellie Vincent, Marie Labrot, Ella Dahlke, Fern Miller, Clara Duncan, Anna Getschal, Luella Taylor, Edith Getschal, Edna Kruger, Anna Johnson, Lucy Wood, Louise Brown, Mary Bever, Lizzie McCamley and Theresa Byrnes, Grand Rapids; Gyneth Lee and Adelaide Eastman, Marshfield; Maud Burroughs, Pausy Short, Erna Miller, Nekoosa; Louisa Sweet, New Rome; Beatrice Ratelle, Rose Ratelle, Celia Vagnais, Josie Johnson, Anna Johnson, Rudolph; Mary Krites, Laura Potter, Clyde Long, Stella Potter, Cassie Raymond, Nona Udell, Mabel Udell, Kate McKeown, Pittsfield; Pearl Osgood, Dexterville; Rose Mohan, Abundale; Bell Young, Stevens Point; Martha Hutz, Mabel White, Vesper; Nellie Victory, Rodney; Grace Daniels, Mayne Malloy, Babcock.

Death of John Albee.

John Albee, one of the oldest settlers of the town of Rudolph, died on Friday of last week from the effects of a paralytic stroke, which he suffered last September.

Mr. Albee was 72 years of age, having been born on the 16th day of January, 1830, at Windsor in the state of Maine. While he had been comparatively helpless since last September, he was enjoying his usual health up to within a few minutes of his death. His wife had just put him to bed that night, about nine o'clock, and a few minutes afterward he was dead.

Mr. Albee came to Wood county in 1856, and being an engineer and millwright he assisted in building and afterward in operating the Clark & Scott mill in Rudolph. He has also worked in other mills in this vicinity since that time, and always led an active and industrious life. He was widely known all about this section, especially to the old settlers.

He is survived by his wife, who resides in the town of Rudolph, and a stepson, W. A. Johnson, of this city. He has also a sister and brother living in Maine, they being Mrs. Ellen Perkins and Benjamin Albee.

The funeral was held on Monday from the Episcopal church in this city and a large concourse of people followed the remains to their last resting place.

STOOD THE TEST.

Waterworks Nearly Ready for General Use.

On Saturday the standpipe was filled with water and everything up in that neighborhood was found to be in first class shape. When the standpipe was full the pressure down town was found to be about 90 pounds to the square inch, which is sufficient for all practical purposes.

The pressure in the mains was also run up to 150 pounds to the square inch in order to give the final test as to strength, this being the pressure which the pipes are supposed to stand if necessary.

The system is now about completed, but Engineer Pfeiffer states that it has not been accepted, and will not be until some improvements are made in the system, in the way of stopping leaks that exist at different places. The pipe across the river is defective in this respect, the leakage being greater than is allowable in a stretch of that length.

On Monday afternoon the standpipe was emptied again and a six-inch stream was run into the river for an hour or more before the water was exhausted. As a six-inch stream is equal in volume to thirty-six one-inch streams, it is evident that the standpipe would supply an ordinary five stream for thirty-six hours, even if no water were pumped in during the interval.

Those of the west side who do not like river water as a steady beverage are anxiously waiting for the time when spring water will be supplied to the entire city.

Hunters' Licenses.

This week County Clerk Renne received his 1902 stock of hunters' licenses from the state, and he is now prepared to fit out our local sportsmen with all the necessary credentials to prevent them from falling into the hands of the game wardens.

The license differs this year from what it was in the past. It is a long and narrow document with the coupons on the end, perforated so as to be easily detachable. The two end coupons are fitted with eyelets like a shipping tag, which makes them more durable when attached to the carcass of a deer, and the entire document is printed on a manilla tag board, making it very tough.

On the back of the license is printed the gist of the game law, which is as follows:

Deer must not be hunted in either of the counties of Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Manitowoc or Calumet at any time.

Deer can only be hunted during the last ten days of November in the counties of Sauk, Adams, Columbia, Richland and Marquette.

Except as above mentioned deer may be hunted in Wisconsin during the last twenty days of November.

Rabbits and squirrels from July 1 to following May 1.

Wild duck, brant, or any aquatic fowl and snipe from September 1 to January 1.

Woodcock, partridge, pheasant, prairie hen, grouse of any variety, or plover from September 1 to December 1.

Must not Be Hunted or Molested.

Swan, Mongolian, Chinese or English pheasant, or quail of any variety. Any Carrier or Homing pigeon. Any harmless bird or the nest or egg of any harmless bird or waterfowl.

Assessment Matters.

Attorney J. W. Cochran, supervisor of assessments, was called to meet with the board of review in the town of Remington on Monday of last week and on Tuesday he met with the town board of review of the town of Port Edwards and the village board of the recently organized village of Port Edwards. Week before last he met with the town boards of the towns of Arpin and Lincoln and was also engaged in correcting errors in manner of making up assessment roll of the town of Milladore.

He reports a general good disposition on the part of assessors and boards of review to do their duty and to follow the rules of law governing their procedure as such officers.

The main difficulty that he encounters is the old practice, which, while wholly unwarranted in the law, has almost universally prevailed before boards of review. Of listening to complaints and arguments and acting thereon without any evidence being produced to warrant a change in the figures made by the assessor, and also the custom on the part of the clerks of keeping no record of the proceedings except such as could be gathered from an inspection of erasures and interlinations made in the assessment roll.

The law requires the clerk to keep full minutes of the proceedings of the board of review and file the same in his office, taking down the name of every person who was sworn and the substance of his testimony and any question he may refuse to answer, and requires the board to disregard every statement that is not sworn to, and prohibits them from raising or lowering any figures made by the assessor except upon competent testimony taken before them.

When once started on the right course in this respect, the boards of review find it very easy to follow the law and much easier to perform their duty than it is to listen to unsworn statements, paid arguments and unfounded complaints.

HEATING CONTRACT

SECURED BY B. F. STURTEVANT

Our High School will Have a Model System—Other Items of Interest.

The bids for heating apparatus for the new high school were opened on Thursday evening by the building committee and it was found that there were six bids for the work, ranging in price from $6,925 to $8,335, the lowest being that of the B. F. Sturtevant company of Boston, Mass., for $6,925. The other bidders were the W. A. Bowers Heating company, $7,456; Archambault Heating and Plumbing company, $7,565; Depond-Hasey company, $7,199; George E. Dixon company, $8,335, and the National Blower Works, $6,960.

While the Sturtevant company's bid was $6,925, the extras desired by the commissioners brought the price up to $7,010, and they feel that they have contracted for as complete and up-to-date a heating system as it is possible to install in a building today.

The heating will be done by a hot blast system, the hot air being produced by coming in contact with steam coils and then forced throughout the building by the use of fans.

There will be two 60-inch tubular boilers, 16 feet long, which will furnish the steam for driving the engine and heating the coils. These boilers will be built by the Freeman company of Racine and will possess a tensile strength of 60,000 pounds to the square inch.

These boilers will furnish steam for the engine that drives the fans as well as steam to heat the coils, and the engine will be of the high grade dynamo type, fitted with two fly wheels which can be used as drive wheels, one for revolving the fans and the other to run a dynamo if it is found desirable. The fan will be 9 feet in diameter and will be driven by belt.

A brick air shaft is being constructed which will draw the air to be used in the building about 12 feet from the ground. The air then goes over a set of tempering coils situated near the foundation of the building. This raises the temperature to about 60 degrees, and as it passes on it goes through the hot air coils which raises it to the required temperature to heat the building. The heating and tempering coils contain about 14,000 feet of tubing.

Each of the rooms will be furnished with a thermostat which, it is claimed, will regulate the heat to a degree by opening and closing the dampers automatically when the temperature varies. The furnaces will be of a type that will burn both wood and coal. The apparatus for controlling the heat is known as the Johnson-Service Heat regulating device and is covered by a guarantee to do the work claimed for it.

Besides this five of the rooms will be furnished with direct radiation in the shape of steam coils, which can be used to heat these rooms at times when the engine is not running which is another very desirable feature of the plant.

Change in Division.—The Wausau Herald is authority for the statement that the division point of the St. Paul road is soon to be moved from Babcock to Wausau. It says in part:—It has long been known that officials of the road were not satisfied with Babcock but there were many difficulties and objections to moving to be overcome. These have gradually been surmounted and now it seems a plan has been perfected for making the change. Next Sunday a new time card will be issued for the Wisconsin Valley division and this will provide for the removal of head quarters for four train crews from Babcock to Wausau. These trains are all way freights and two will start out of Wausau north and two south each day, giving this city a much better freight service than ever before.

Snaring the Ungodly.—Wausau ministers of the gospel have hit upon the plan of holding their sessions out of doors during the hot weather. They will use the lawn about the court house for the congregation and preach from the band stand. This scheme should fill a long felt want with the man who cannot stand it to sit out a sermon inside a stuffy church during the heated season and who is kept from divine services the remainder of the year on account of the extreme cold.

New Postal Card.—A new one-cent postal card is now being printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington and when the first issue of four million has been counted and bundled the new cards will be placed on sale. Its distinctive feature will be a vignette of President McKinley in the place of that of President Jefferson. The issue of the old style card is to be discontinued when the stock is sold. There is also a change in the manner of placing the lettering on the face of the card, leaving a wider blank margin at the top for the postmark.

Want New Depot.—The people of Marshfield have petitioned the Northwestern road to build a new depot at that place, but the company has not done anything in the matter. Their depots at Marshfield are about the same as the structures in our city before the Northwestern was built, and are nothing like the city should have considering the business that is done there.

Caught a Mink.—D. M. Huntington has added another animal to his menagerie in the shape of a young mink, which he caught in the road near his place. The little fellow is quite tame and docile and lively as a cricket, and quite a curiosity to people who never saw one of the animals. As he eats freely and seems to be enjoying life, there is every chance that he will grow to maturity.

Adjudged Insane.—Mrs. Agnes Young, wife of Thomas Young of the town of Grand Rapids, was taken before Judge Conway on Thursday morning and examined as to her sanity. Drs. Looze and Pomainville made the examination and found the woman suffering from mental aberration in a marked degree. She was taken to the northern hospital for the insane on Thursday afternoon.

Wrecked at Engine.—A locomotive on the Northwestern road was pretty badly smashed up on Monday near Kellner by the breaking of one of the connecting rods between the drive wheels. The broken rod thrashed around and demolished the cab, but luckily the men on the engine escaped without injury. The locomotive was brought to this city and subsequently taken to the shops.

Beaten by Marshfield.—The combination of ball players that went to Marshfield on Sunday to play the team up there were pretty badly beaten, the score standing 17 to 1 in favor of Marshfield. The boys say, however, that they went up for a good time and had it. The weather was very hot, not the kind one would pick out for this sort of sport.

Excursion to Wausau.—On Friday, the 18th instant, the Methodist and Congregational Sunday schools will give an excursion to Wausau, only one dollar for the round trip. The excursion will go over the Wisconsin Central road, going to Marshfield and thence to Wausau. Train leaves here at 7 a. m., and returning leaves Wausau at 6 p. m.

Shipping Blueberries.—The blueberry crop is turning out fairly good this year in spite of the reported scarcity earlier in the season. Loads of pickers start for the blueberry patches every day and the sight of the wagon loads of men, women and children that go out in the morning and come back at night is really amusing.

Blue Rock Scores.—The following scores were made at the shooting park last Sunday. First event, 25 birds: Scott 21, Mason 19, Young 19, Church 15, Drumb 18. Second event, 25 birds: Scott 23, Mason 21, Church 18, Drumb 18, Mosher 18. Third event, 25 birds: Scott 20, Mason 22, Mosher 17, Drumb 14, Church 22.

Took in Excursions.—About forty-five persons took in the excursion to Marshfield on Sunday, and about thirty-five went to the Dells. The Grand Rapids band also accompanied the excursion to the Dells, and enlivened the occasion with some of their choicest music.

Street Fair Seems a Cinch.—The committee to secure a guarantee fund for the proposed street fair has been at work for several days and is meeting with general support. The committee hopes to run the guarantee up to about $4,000 in a few days more.—Marshfield News.

Lost a Finger.—James Norton, who is employed at the mill of the Grand Rapids Lumber company, lost a joint of the first finger of his right hand on Friday by having the member crushed between a dog and the log on the carriage.

Circuses Galore.—This city is enjoying a deluge of circuses just at present, and it is said that Buffalo Bill also intends to make the town before the season is over. It would seem as if we were really getting more than our share.

Mrs. Mary Peterson.

The body of Mrs. Mary Peterson of Stevens Point was brought to this city on Monday and buried, the funeral taking place from the Norwegian Moravian church. Mrs. Peterson died on Saturday of last week as the result of an operation for strangulated hernia.

Mrs. Peterson was born in Denmark and was sixty-three years old and formerly resided in the town of Sigel. Her husband, P. Peterson, died 18 years ago. Four children survive the mother, they being William Peterson, now in Florida, James of the town of Rudolph, Sophia of Eau Claire and John, who lived with his mother in Stevens Point.

Millinery Stock Sold.

On Friday Miss Grace Getts sold her millinery shop on west side to T. J. Remann, who with his wife, will conduct the establishment in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. Remann are from Lakefield, Minn., Mr. Remann being a tailor by trade and Mrs. Remann a milliner. Mr. Remann may engage in the tailoring business here, but has not decided as yet. The new firm expect to occupy the old stand on the west side.

Killed by Lightning.

William Hanke of Marshfield was struck by lightning on Monday afternoon and instantly killed while in the barn of John P. Hume. He was standing with his hands in his pockets when struck and was so instantly killed that when he was picked up he still had his hands in his pockets. Several others near him were severely shocked by the bolt but suffered no permanent hurt.

DELAVAN HOTEL BURNS.

Lake Side House with All Its Cottages is Destroyed.

LOSS IS ABOUT $5000.

High Wind Fanned Flames, Causing Them to Spread Rapidly—Fire Started in Kitchen.

Delavan, Wis., July 14.—The Lake side hotel, together with all its cottages and outbuildings and two large cottages belonging to the neighborhood, were destroyed by fire today. The fire started in the kitchen of the hotel and spread rapidly to the other buildings. The hotel was owned by the late Thomas H. Farrell of Chicago, and had been newly furnished and remodeled for this season's patronage by his son, William J. Farrell. This is the fifth hotel fire at Delavan Lake, three within a year. The loss is about $5000, partly covered by insurance.

The place was known as Irwinwood until it was bought three years ago by the late Thomas H. Farrell of Chicago, who renamed it Lakeside. It was managed this season by W. J. Farrell and O. J. Amos of Chicago. Major stock and services were furnished by a few city and Mr. Amos and Mr. Farrell.

Two cottages belonging to the late Gable, an adjacent owner, owned by Gen. B. and Roy E. Hildner, were also burned, the loss being $1000.

HORSE THIEVES AT WORK.

GANG IS OPERATING IN WESTERN PART OF STATE.

Many Thefts Have Been Reported—Man Held Up Near West Bend and Horse Stolen.

La Crosse, Wis., July 14.—An organized gang of horse thieves is working in the western part of this state and eastern part of Minnesota. During the past week as many as six stolen horses have been reported to the authorities here from various parts of this section of the country. One was stolen at West Salem Saturday and another at Melrose yesterday. The thieves usually take a buggy also. The sheriff's force had been unsuccessful in their search thus far.

West Bend, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—The hired man of L. H. Meier of Chicago, who is spending the summer at Cedar Lake, near here, was stopped by three men near Richfield on Saturday evening and the horse and rig which he was in charge of was taken from him. The three men then drove away with the rig. The sheriff was notified, but he has been unable to get any trace of the men and rig.

MANITOWOC MAN HELD FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER.

John Dietrich Went to Son-in-Law's Home Saturday and Fired at Him.

Manitowoc, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—John Dietrich was arraigned in municipal court this morning charged with having committed an assault with intent to kill upon the person of his stepson, James Brink. Dietrich came upon the property of the Schwartzentruber Soda Water Manufacturing Company on Franklin street Saturday evening with the purpose of shooting at his son-in-law and his wife. Brink ordered him off the premises, but Dietrich refused to go. An altercation followed, when Dietrich drew a revolver. Brink fled into an outhouse close by, Dietrich following and firing two shots in rapid succession. He then went and thrust the revolver through the door in the outhouse, but the revolver would not work. Brink had thrown himself on the floor and this is the only thing that saved his life, for had he been standing the shots would have struck him. The trouble between the parties seems to have arisen out of the separation of Dietrich and his wife some time ago. Since that time Dietrich has on several occasions threatened to take the life of both his son and wife and they have lived in constant fear of him. Saturday afternoon, it is claimed, he publicly declared that he would do so. He was arrested by Officer Duono and Smith and placed in jail.

MAIN WILL FILED.

Former Madison Senator Leaves an Estate Valued at $100,000.

Madison, Wis., July 14.—Will of S. Main, former state senator and brother-in-law of United States Senator John C. Spooner, who died at his farm in Blooming Grove July 7, left an estate valued at $100,000, according to the petition for probate filed in the county court. The estate includes the county valued at $75,000, personal estate at $12,000, and property in other forms will bring the value of the estate up to $100,000.

The heirs mentioned in the petition are Mrs. Sophia L. Main, widow; Hamilton W. Main, son; John S. Main, son; Louis Main, daughter; all of Madison; Frank J. Main, son; Blooming Grove; Grace Main Spooner, daughter; Milwaukee; Annie Main Kempton, daughter; St. Carroll, Ill. The petition was set for hearing at the September term of the court.

TEACHERS CAN DANCE AGAIN.

Cumberland Repeals Rule Passed Against Dancing Five Years Ago.

Cumberland, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—At the regular school meeting an appropriation of $22,500 was voted for the construction of a large modern brick school house. At the same meeting the school board was instructed to repeal the rule which prohibits teachers attending dances. The ruling was made some five years ago, but the sentiment of the people of the city has become very strong against it, so strong in fact that the mayor of the city introduced the resolution asking its repeal, which was passed almost unanimously.

NO HOPE FOR RECOVERY.

Dr. Adams' Physicians Claim that Patient Cannot Regain Health.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 14.—There is practically no chance in the condition of Dr. Charles Kendall Adams, his physicians said that while there is no hope of ultimate recovery his patient may linger for weeks, or if a change for the worse occurs the end may come any day. The condition of Mrs. Adams is much improved.

BRAGG MAY BE RECALLED.

STATEMENT IN A PRIVATE LETTER OFFENSIVE TO CUBANS.

Old Age and Lack of Experience Pleaded in Extenuation—"Pig's-Tail" an Unfortunate Simile.

Washington, D. C., July 14.—Gen. Bragg's indiscreet utterance in his letter to his wife is likely to cost him his place as consul general to Cuba. It is said by diplomatic people here that the use of a pig's tail as part of a simile expressive of the consul general's views is likely to give great offense to the people of Cuba. In fact, the Spanish idiom leads themselves especially to the use of the pig as an epithet of reproach, and to say, as Gen. Bragg is reported as saying, that he would be eager to make a pig's tail out of a pig's tail then means even more in Spanish than in English.

At the state department there is a decided disposition to recall Gen. Bragg, because he is an old man and was a great soldier. Nevertheless, it is admitted at once that if the Cubans call attention to the criticism, Gen. Bragg will have to be recalled at once as a person who does not object to being called a pig's tail. It is said that Gen. Bragg is in Havana will be entirely destroyed unless the unfortunate letter to Mrs. Bragg is disavowed promptly.

As a matter of international usage, the expression by a consul general of the opinion that the people of a government are a pig's tail is a very serious matter. It would be sufficient to insure his recall. When there is coupled with this the use of a seriously offensive simile it is feared that nothing can save Gen. Bragg but an exhibition of unselfish forcefulness not common in countries where Spanish is spoken.

It is said that if the English, French, or German consul to the United States would be publicly quoted in this way he would be dismissed by this country without ceremony. There is no such rule, however, for Gen. Bragg, on account of his age and his lack of experience.

At the Cuban legation the flag hoisted all day and far into the night, but the whole building was vacant. Minister Quesada having left the day to enjoy a vacation at Chevy Chase.

ONE TRAMP CAPTURED.

Member of Gang of Hoboes Who Killed Conductor Young Near Rhineland Caught.

Rhineland, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—R. T. Smith, a North-Western brakeman, has effected the capture of one of the three men who murdered Conductor Young. He captured the man last night about ten miles from Pelican Lake, on the Cranston branch of the North-Western. Smith had stationed himself on an embankment overlooking the track and, owing to the light of the moon, he could see clearly.

At 11 o'clock Smith saw a man below him, and promptly ordered him to throw up his hands. The man threw up his left hand and held that his right was shattered by a bullet and he could not raise it. Smith kept the man covered and found he spoke the truth. He then marched him to Pelican station and brought him here. At 4 o'clock this morning he was taken to jail and his wound dressed. Two bullets had passed through his arm and the bone was shattered. Doctors report that the arm must be amputated. The man is 34 years old and gives the name of O'Donnell. Nothing was found on him, but he has been identified as one of the men shot by the Pelican lake hunters Sunday.

No correct statement could be obtained from him this morning owing to opiates which had been administered. He intended to Smith that the entire party could have been captured when he was shot if the Pelican lake men had followed them up.

Rhineland, Wis., July 14.—H. T. Young, a conductor on the North-Western road, was shot through the head by a gang of tramps Saturday night, while he was attempting to put them off his train near here.

After the shooting the trio of hoboes succeeded in making their escape. A posse was organized and the tramps were pursued. Elmer Revere and George Corneal of Pelican Lake gave chase, succeeded in coming up with the tramps yesterday morning. An exchange of shots ensued during which it is claimed that the murderer was badly wounded. He was carried away by his companions.

One tramp was arrested yesterday, charged with being implicated in the shooting of Saturday. He admits being on the train at the time, but says he did not take a hand in the encounter. He will be held pending the capture of the other tramps.

Young is a veteran railroad man and leaves a large family at Antioch. The North-Western road has offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the tramps. Oconto county has offered an additional $100 for their arrest.

ENDS LIFE WITH ROPE.

Mrs. Theodore Wait of North Prairie, Waukesha County, Wis., Commits Suicide.

Waukesha, Wis., July 14.—[Special.]—With her mind temporarily deranged by the shock of the recent death of her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Wait, aged 60 years, committed suicide yesterday morning by hanging herself to a tree in a wooded place near her home. She accomplished her design by hanging herself to a cypress in a wooded place near her home. She had been in a state of mental trouble for some time, and had been in the hospital at Oshkosh from which she was released about twelve years ago. She had shown no signs of any further mental trouble until a few months ago when her daughter, who resided near this city, died rather suddenly and from that time on she became the frequent victim of melancholia. Yesterday morning she got up from the breakfast table and left the house. When two hours passed and she had not returned, the members of the family commenced a systematic search and she was finally found by her daughter, hanging in one of the upper rooms of the house. The coroner's jury met yesterday afternoon and decided that she came to her death by her own hand. Mrs. Wait is survived by her husband and four children. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Tobacco Crop is Promising.

Edgerton, Wis., July 14.—The Wisconsin tobacco crop is making a remarkable growth in all sections, though the heavy rains of late have delayed some needed cultivation. It is generally admitted that the crop never looked more promising at this season of the year, with prospects of an unusually early harvest.

COUPLE CELEBRATE SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

CALEB COOK.

MRS. CALEB COOK.

Baraboo, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—Caleb Cook and wife, who celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary this week, have had some unique experiences. While he was employed on the Erie canal more than sixty years ago he decided to take a ride over all the railroads in the state of New York. This he succeeded in accomplishing twice in one half day. At that time there was but one road in operation in the state and that was between Albany and Schenectady, a distance of seventy miles.

After their marriage in Webster, Monroe county, N. Y., they came to Wisconsin, making the journey around the lakes to Milwaukee and then to Kenosha, where they arrived on October 4, thus ending their honeymoon trip. In fact, was taken in a log cabin, the only one of its kind at Kenosha then. In his excitement to obtain some government land Mr. Cook wandered into Lake county, Illinois, where he secured a farm and resided upon it for a dozen years.

When they came to Sauk county in 1833 there were but a few huts at Baraboo, and Kilaheon, Reedsburg and the smaller centers of population in this vicinity were unthought of.

He was a member of the county board when the court house at Baraboo was built and was clerk of the last grand jury that convened in this county. During the administrations of Buchanan and Lincoln he was postmaster at Delona and has been assessor, town clerk or justice of the peace for nearly all his residence in this state.

After forming the habit of using tobacco and keeping in practice for forty years he concluded to discontinue the weed and has refused to chew or smoke since quitting the habit.

Mr. Cook has a remarkable number of ancestors noted for longevity, and these he can trace back to the beginning of civilization in New England. His forefathers came from Scotland and were among the first settlers in Rhode Island.

There are four surviving children, fifteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. Mr. Cook is 85 and his wife is seven years younger.

STRUCK WITH A HAMMER.

Farmer Living in Town of Scott Alleged to Have Hit Neighbor.

MAN MAY NOT RECOVER

One Rib was Broken and the Victim's Lungs Were Penetrated by the Hammer.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—Truman Young, a farmer residing in the town of Scott near here, is being held here on a serious charge.

It is alleged that he struck Andrew Brown, a neighboring farmer, in the back under the shoulder, with a hammer. One rib was broken and the hammer is said to have penetrated the man's lungs.

Brown is reported in a critical condition as a result of the attack and Young is being held to await the outcome of the injuries. A preliminary hearing has been set for July 15.

WILL HOLD POW-WOW.

Twenty Indian Tribes Have Agreed to Attend Big Friendship Festival.

Black River Falls, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—No-Gin-Ka (Little Soldier), second medicine chief of the Winnebago, has gone to Nebraska to secure a large delegation of leading Indians from the reservation to attend and take part in the coming friendship festival that is to be held at the old sacred and historical hunting haunts of the Winnebago Indians.

The festival will be held this fall, and at that time the grounds which have been purchased by (Chief White Buffalo) Thomas R. Roddy of Chicago will be given to the Indians as a present at this gathering, which will be one of the largest since 1829, then held at Prairie du Chien. About twenty tribes will be represented at this meeting. Green Cloud, the big war chief, is now in Nebraska, but has consented to return in the fall and take an active part in the ceremony.

Toughness of big chiefs will be brought to the fore, and peace pipes will be smoked, after which dancing, feasting and all kinds of presents and peace offerings are made to each other.

The tribes that meet at this time will ever after be friendly to each other. T. R. Roddy has been in this section three weeks working among the Indians for this gathering. He has now gone to Northern Wisconsin to consult chiefs of other tribes and make further arrangements as to time and dates.

FORTUNE FOR BADGER.

Judge Chase of Indiana Leaves Immense Estate to Oconto Relatives—Children Disinherited.

La Porte, Ind., July 12.—Judge D. H. Chase, a noted Indiana jurist, died recently at Logansport, leaving the bulk of a large fortune to his wife, William Chase of Oconto, Wis., who is credited with being immensely wealthy. Judge Chase's three children because they had incurred his displeasure. A conference will be held at Oconto regarding the disposition of the estate, and the statement is made at Logansport that the Wisconsin millionaire will provide handsomely for the disinherited children of his Indiana relative, conditions that in contest of the will is made in the court.

BREWERIES COMBINED.

Two Plants at La Crosse are United—Will be Enlarged.

La Crosse, Wis., July 12.—[Special.]—A new brewing company is about to be organized in this city to be known as the Gund, Hoffman Brewing Association, taking in the local plants of George Zeisler & Sons and G. Hoffman Brewing Company. The new concern is to be capitalized with $400,000. John Gund, Jr., formerly with the John Gund Brewing Company of this city, is the promoter. He proposes to greatly enlarge the present plant of the G. Hoffman Brewing Company and to increase its capacity. George Zeisler and E. T. Mueller are the other promoters.

MANITOWOC SHIPYARD

SOLD TO CHICAGO FIRM.

Deal Which Has Been Hanging Fire for Some Time Consummated Yesterday.

Manitowoc, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—The sale of the Burger shipyard of this city to the Chicago Drydock & Shipbuilding Company, which has been under consideration for some months was consummated yesterday afternoon, when articles of incorporation were filed by the Manitowoc Drydock Company. The consideration of the sale was $110,000. The new company is incorporated under the laws of Wisconsin and has a capital stock of $150,000, the local incorporators being J. L. Nolan, C. H. Tegen and W. M. Jorje. The new company will continue the business carried on by Burger & Burger with increased facilities. Work will be begun in November preparatory for the construction of steel boats and by 1906 the yards will have completed facilities for steel construction. The new company in addition to the purchase of the Burger yards has obtained a long-time lease on the Wisconsin Central property. It is stated on good authority that the new owners are connected with the syndicate recently formed to buy up all the drydocks in the country. Messrs. Burger and Burger retain no interest in the plant, but will retire from active business life.

MURDER MYSTERY.

Sexton of McGregor, Ia., Cemetery Found Beside Track with Holes in His Head.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., July 11.—The murder mystery at McGregor, Ia., is deepening daily and the residents are greatly excited over the new developments in the case. Sexton Wilson of the cemetery here found beside the railroad track with several holes in his head. It was claimed that he had been run over and killed.

A negro by the name of Dabe Graham has been placed under custody until further developments, as it is claimed he knows something about the crime. While speaking to a friend recently he is alleged to have said that a woman struck Wilson with a pick and then to cover her crime dragged the body to the track. A solution of the crime is expected in a day or two.

MYSTERY AT SUPERIOR.

Body of Shipyard Workman Found Floating in Slip—Head was Badly Bruised.

West Superior, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—Murder or accident? That is the question Coroner Dudley is asking concerning the death of Erick Kytala, a workman recently employed at the shipyards whose body was found floating in Towson slip today.

A black eye is the only mark upon the man that is likely to lead to a clue and the police are working on it. It is evident that the body had lain in the water for several days and none of his acquaintances had seen him since about the Fourth.

Inquiry has failed to disclose any fights in the vicinity of the slip that may have caused the tragedy and it is possible that the body was given him early in the day of the Fourth celebration, and that the man afterward wandered too near the slip when in a celebration condition.

YACHT BUILDERS EXPAND.

Constructors of Famous Racer Tecumseh Preparing to Branch Out.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 11.—Jones & LaBorde, builders of the yachts Milwaukee and Tecumseh, intend to branch out on a larger scale in the future. A stock company is being organized and larger quarters are to be obtained. The two victorious yachts should bring considerable work for the local yacht builders and the two experts are preparing for any rush which may ensue. Pleasure yachts are also to be constructed in the future, as they have had several requests for them recently.

NEW PRIEST AT RICHMOND.

Rev. Francisus of Washington Accepts Call to Wisconsin Parish.

La Porte, Ind., July 12.—[Special.]—The chapter of Notre Dame has closed its sessions at the university. The announcement of the annual changes of the locations of parishes removes Rev. P. J. Francisus of Washington, D. C., to the large Catholic parish at Richmond, Wis. Rev. J. Carroll of Watertown, Wis., will be connected the coming year with the faculty of the new Catholic university at Portland, Or.

GLOVE FACTORY TO LOCATE AT SHEBOYGAN.

Ross-Sellinger Company of Chicago Contemplate Moving Entire Plant from Chicago Soon.

Sheboygan, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—The Ross-Sellinger Company of Chicago is considering a proposition from Geo. B. Mattoon of this city, who offers to put up a four-story building as a factory for the glove company, now employing 200 hands in Chicago. The company is running a factory here, employing forty hands. The entire plant will be located here.

LA CROSSE LABORERS DEMAND HIGHER WAGES.

Want Increase of 25 Cents Per Day and Shorter Hours of Work—Demand Not Granted.

La Crosse, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—The entire crew of laborers working on the gravel trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road east of here struck this morning for higher wages. They were refused their demands and all were brought back to the city.

They want $1.75 instead of $1.50, claiming that the necessities of life are so high that they cannot afford to work for the latter price. About seventy-five men are out and it is expected that other laborers working on other parts of the road will shortly join them.

Another demand is that they be taken from the city at 7 o'clock instead of at 12:30 in the morning and brought back at 5 instead of 7 or 8 o'clock at night.

KAUKAUNA LIGHT LITIGATION IS ENDED.

Electric Light Company Agrees to a Compromise with the Municipality in the Matter.

Kaukauna, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—A final settlement of the whole electric light company litigation with the city of Kaukauna is in sight. Some time since Mayor Mendenhall appointed a committee to whom was given power to arrange a compromise in the matter where the company would concede somewhat to the city and thus be able to secure the pay due them for electric lighting. At a meeting held last evening the company made very liberal concessions, and it is now thought the whole trouble will be soon concluded.

The city is to get an all-night arc lamp at $65 per year. This is the same price they have heretofore paid for a 1 o'clock light. The company also proposes to rewire the city officials' room, council room and police office and furnish free light therein until July, 1904.

JUDGE H. E. HUBBARD DIES AT LA CROSSE.

Well-Known Lawyer Who Lived There Fifty Years Dies After Lingering Illness.

La Crosse, Wis., July 11.—Judge Harvey E. Hubbard, for fifty-one years a resident of this city and one of its very first settlers, died this morning after a lingering illness of three months. He was appointed postmaster under President Pierce and held the office for many years, being the longest postmaster the city ever had. He was judge of the criminal court for many years also and was in many ways prominently connected with the early history of Western Wisconsin.

Harvey Hubbard was born at Pompey, Oneida county, New York, on March 17, 1839. He received his early education in the schools there until he was 13 years of age, when he entered Naudus Academy, remaining there two years, when he came West with his parents, who settled at Milwaukee. There he clerked in a store for two years, at the same time studying law with Hayden Powers, and when he became of age he was admitted to the bar. He moved to La Crosse in 1851, making the trip by stage and steam. He has resided here ever since and has held many public offices.

Richard Nommensen, Sheboygan.

Sheboygan, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—Richard Nommensen, the son of J. L. Nommensen, a well-known contractor, died yesterday from consumption. He was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and for four years was civil engineer for the Milwaukee road. He was 27 years of age.

H. B. Johnson, Janesville.

Janesville, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—Henry B. Johnson, who has been a resident of this county since 1844, died at his home at the age of 84 years. He was one of the pioneer merchants of Rock county and his father built the Myers hotel.

Mrs. Maria McDonald, Beloit.

Beloit, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Maria McDonald, aged 67 years, died at her home yesterday.

FOUR MEN INJURED IN RAILROAD WRECK.

Work Train on North-Western Road is Derailed at Malone, Near Fond du Lac.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—An eastbound work train of the Sheboygan division of the Chicago & North-Western railway was wrecked shortly after 7 o'clock this morning. The train was derailed at Malone, The accident was caused by a spreading of the rails. Four men were injured.

Cassian Dettler of Kenosha, stone cutter, arm and leg injured.
W. L. Dettler, stone cutter, cut about the head.

The engine was backing with the train of four cars, all of which were loaded with stone. All the cars were derailed and badly demolished.

ANDREWS TRIAL POSTPONED.

Hearing in Episcopal Church Case will be Held in September.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 11.—Bishop Graham yesterday announced that the hearing in the ecclesiastical trial of Rev. M. C. Andrews will not be held until some time in September. He says several important witnesses are not available at present and this caused the postponement.

Federal Building for Chippewa Falls.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]—In an address before the Progressive League last night, Congressman John J. Jenkins spoke encouragingly regarding Chippewa Falls' possibilities of securing a government building. He said he had been promised support before leaving Washington and is confident of securing appropriation.

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS.

Wages and Cost of Living.

The United States Steel Corporation has raised the wages of about 100,000 men 10 per cent. It is estimated that this will add $4,000,000 to the yearly payroll. This is a public move. It forestalls applications for an advance in wages, which would probably have been made in a short time. The men employed in the steel and iron industries are working full time. They have been getting wages which two years ago seemed quite fair, but a dollar does not buy so much of the necessities of life as it did two years ago.

Workingmen are often reproached unjustly for their urgent demands for higher pay in prosperous seasons, when they are steadily employed and are receiving what seems to their critics fair wages. The critics are apt to overlook the fact that, while the price of labor is going up, the cost of living is going up also, and if the latter goes up more rapidly than the former the workingman may feel pinched and become dissatisfied. He hears a great deal about prosperity and sees evidences of it all around him, but he finds that his income does not go quite so far as it did when wages were a little lower.

The great item of expenditure with the workingman with a family is food. More than half his earnings go to buy it. The price of foodstuffs has been unusually high for some time. It is not surprising, in view of the increased cost of a meal, that there should be appeals in so many quarters for higher wages.

When business is less active and profits fall off, the United States Steel Corporation may wish to reduce wages. To that reduction a fall in the cost of living will not reconcile the men in its employ. They want higher wages when it costs more to live; they fight hard against lower wages even though the cost of living has gone down. This is not logical, but it is natural.—Chicago Tribune.

Vaccination Valid.

The Minnesota Supreme Court declares vaccination valid. It does not of course pronounce on ways and means, it does not take up the cause of vaccinationists and anti-vaccinationists and declare one right and the other wrong. This would savor of ancient theological controversy as participated in by the State, and indeed the attendant acrimony has been very similar. But the State merely affirms the right of a community to take all recognized measures looking toward the preservation of the public health.

Vaccination is such a recognized measure. Its virtue has been questioned, and its opponents are clearly within their academic right when they summon vaccination before the bar and find indir-ment against it. Vaccination may be as serious, as fatal, as the disease against which it inoculates, and, moreover, it is not always a preventive, never a certain preventive. All this the anti-vaccinationists are justified in asserting and in attempting to prove.

But the State moves slowly and it has recognized vaccination as a necessity in preserving the public health during times of epidemic. The State gives to a health commissioner power to employ all recognized means to preserve that public health. It grants him, by this recent decision, the right to compel vaccination. It might determine to have nothing to do with vaccine. It might determine that every smallpox patient and every person exposed to smallpox should be vaccinated by the common hangman, should be hanged by the neck until dead, or shot down in ranks. It has the power to do this. It has the power, although the individual forgets it, of life and death. In the case of leprosy this is recognized. Solitary incarceration is death in life. The State is the supreme arbiter of good and ill to the people.

The vaccination controversy will continue. Health officers may still insist that children shall be vaccinated before entering school. The law of compulsory education may insist that these children attend school. The net is close.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Happiness of the Home.

Should a wife be bothered by her husband's troubles? Let us change the wording to read: Is a husband bothered by his wife's troubles? The majority of married men will give an answer in the negative. No matter what the trials of the hours have been, the wife endeavors to brush them one side, when evening comes. She is then always better dressed than at any time during the day, she usually has a happy smile of welcome and she adds fresh laurels to the most magnificent institution the world knows—the American home. There are many vexatious trials, multitudinous cross events of a housewife's day that are never mentioned. They are borne bravely, and wrongs are remedied as best they can be without inflicting the burden upon the man.

Now the question arises. Does the husband bear his trials with the same bravery and carry the same encouraging smile when he comes home? If things have gone wrong at the office or at the store is not my lord usually in a despondent frame of mind and does he not carry his worries to the fireside with him? It is done for comfort and consolation, no doubt, but that is hardly fair. Talk about the dependence of woman all you may, but when the test comes it is the man who is dependent and who seeks surcease in woman's tender appreciation. This should not be.

Of course there are business affairs which must be told to one's wife—affairs which affect the family's future and concerning which she should be made acquainted, but the average care of the day can be cast aside until the morrow, and it should not intrude on the happiness of the home.—Cincinnati Post.

Invasion of Northwest Canada.

Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest are repeating with great rapidity the history of the winning of our West. The problem of absorbing the Galicians, Russians and other refractory races is specifically Canadian, but the remarkable influx of American settlers in these regions must affect both Canada and ourselves. As yet we have no accurate statistics of this agrarian invasion. Yet some idea of its significance may be gained from the following figures. In the years 1898-1900 the total immigration from America to Canada was, respectively, 9,119, 11,945 and 15,500. During the first five months of the present year the Great Northern Railroad alone carried 25,000 immigrants into Manitoba. While some of these were taken directly from the incoming steamers, many were either American-born or thoroughly Americanized. This cannot continue without producing its effect upon the relations of the two countries. A constant social intercourse and common agricultural interests in the Northwest will more and more reduce the boundary to its definition as an "imaginary line."—New York Evening Post.

Schwab's Foolish Advice.

Schwab has been giving some more foolish advice to young men. To the graduates of the Pennsylvania State College he said:

"The worst thing you can do is to start in life with influence. Nothing will ever do you so much injury. Never ask your friends to help you."

This is advice that Mr. Schwab never acted upon himself. Nor did any other successful man. To depend entirely upon influence and not upon one's self and one's own efforts is, of course, fatally wrong. No young man who does that can succeed, however potent the influences in his favor may be. But at the same time, true worth and intelligent, earnest effort on the part of any young man will attract to him friends and influences that will be mightily helpful to him. These are not to be despised, but are to be cultivated and treasured and used. In the complex life of this age individual effort counts for little unless joined and in harmony with forces that control.—St. Louis Chronicle.

NATION'S GOVERNMENT SEAT.

City of Washington the Most Beautiful Capital in the World.

Washington is the most beautiful capital in the world. There are 4,650 acres of parks in the city. The Mall, in the very heart of the downtown district, contains nearly 1,000 acres and beside these parks there are some 220 little triangles and circles at the bisections of streets and avenues, braving places where one may also find a fountain, or one of our great "men on horseback" done in bronze. Every-

These lend to the social atmosphere a tone which is lacking in other American cities.

NEW KING IS A HUSTLER.

Indolence of the Former Prince of Wales Has Vanished.

Since King Edward's promotion from the position of heir apparent to that of sovereign, a good many rather significant changes have been observable in his character and none of them is more striking than that which has taken place in his attitude towards his responsibility, and harder still to make sure that he turned up at the different private and state functions, where his presence was indispensable.

Comparatively speaking King Edward has not made so many changes in his routine or in the various palace staffs, but for everyone that has been made there has been some business-like reason. When it came to head-chopping the king showed himself no respecter of persons. Queen Victoria had given the charge of Windsor castle to the Duke of Argyll, but the king wanted to have the management in his own hands and so he placed Lord Esher, one of his most trusted servants, at the head of the castle affairs.

As His Child Saw Him.

A prominent real estate man in Los Angeles had an experience a few evenings ago that kept him guessing for a little bit as to whether he should feel complimented or otherwise. He was at home with one little daughter while his wife and another of the children were downtown. Darkness was coming on and the little girl was anxiously watching for her mother's return. Her nervousness grew apace, in spite of the father's attempts at reassurance. At length the little one burst into tears, saying:

"I just can't help it! I need mamma, and I must have her!"

"Do you do this way when your mamma is here and I'm away?" asked the father.

"No, of course, not," replied the little one. "Cause then there's some grown-up person about the house."—Los Angeles Herald.

Wanted Specific Information.

The teacher had been impressing upon her class the advantage of a competency gained by honest, hard work over one gained by scheming and even more questionable means and, thinking she had made a great impression upon her small charges, she proceeded to catechize them on the subject: "Once upon a time there were two rich men, one of whom made his fortune by honest industry, while the other made his by fraud. Now, which of these two men would you prefer to be?" Tommy (after a moment's hesitation): "Which made the most?"

Alert for an Angel.

Stormington Barnes and his leading man were passing a village church. "Listen!" exclaimed the eminent tragedian.

"Does the music of the choir carry you back to your boyhood days?"

"No, but you know how long we have been looking for some one with money who was willing to back the show?"

"Yes."

"Well, I think I hear some one inside there singing, 'I want to be an angel.'"

Man has very little use for advice that doesn't confirm his own opinion.

ONE GREAT NOVELIST.

VARYING CAREER OF JAMES FENNIMORE COOPER.

Unpromising Youth of This Recognized Genius—His Long-Dormant Powers—Change from Popularity to Unpopularity—Foremost American Novelist.

James Fennimore Cooper, the dean of American novelists, holds a position in our native literature at once unique and distinctive.

It matters but little now that his literary genius should have remained dormant for so long a time as a diamond in the rough before accident chipped off the crude exterior, disclosing the brilliant luster within. It is of small importance that his early life, spent in aimless pursuits, was wholly without promise of future achievements, and soon but a regrettable memory will also be the fact that during the last few years of his life through misunderstandings and misrepresentations his breast was filled with feelings of deep rancor toward men who should have been his friends and who in turn denounced both him and the products of his pen. These circumstances, the inevitable contradictory accompaniments of recognized ability, have waned indistinctly into a hazy background, against which stands boldly the undisputed truth that the author of "The Spy and The Pilot" is justly worthy of all praise that has been or may be accorded him.

The life of this varying popular and unpopular author had its beginning September 15, 1796, at Burlington, N. J. His parents were both of Quaker extraction. Soon after the close of the Revolutionary war the Cooper family established a household within the borders of New York State near the headwaters of the Susquehanna River. They encouraged the populating of this vicinity and subsequently laid out the site of Cooperstown. The Cooper family decided to make their permanent home in the town founded by them and in 1799 completed the erection of a spacious manor house, known as Otsego Hall, which was for many years the most commodious and stately private residence in central New York.

To every reader that has been charmed with the spell of Cooper's Indian romances, the surroundings of his boyhood days are significant. During those years the foremost pioneers of emigration had barely begun to push their way westward through the Mohawk Valley, the first available highway to the west. Out of the forest that bordered Otsego Lake Indians came for barter, or possibly with hostile intent, and from these no doubt Cooper drew the portraits of the red men who live in his pages. Such wild surroundings could not but stimulate a naturally active imagination and the influence of the wilderness, augmented afterwards by the somewhat similar influence of the sea, pervaded his entire life.

From a private tutor he received his earliest education and at the age of 13 entered the freshman class of Yale College. According to his own account, he learned but little at college. His love of out-of-doors freedom led him to neglect his books and he roamed about and explored the rugged hills northward of New Haven and the equally picturesque shores of Long Island Sound. Gradually he became wilder and more persistent in his defiance of academic restraints and was finally expelled.

Upon leaving his studies the love of activity and adventure laid hold on the youth and he decided to take up the life of a seaman. In 1806 he made his first voyage as a sailor before the mast on the ship Spartan, sailing from New York with a cargo of flour for foreign markets. After this he served for a time as midshipman on the Vesuvius and was later ordered to Oswego, N. Y., with a construction party to build a brig for service on Lake Ontario.

Then he was given charge of the gunboat Attila on Lake Champlain and was subsequently ordered to the Wasp. In 1811 he married a daughter of John Peter Delancey, of Westchester County, N. Y., and resigned his position in the navy to settle into a quiet, domestic life. In deference to his wife's wishes he built his home in Westchester County on what was known as the Angeline farm in the town of Scarsdale, in which locality many stirring events of the Revolution had taken place. The impressions gained from the historic associations surrounding him here were of inestimable value to him in the descriptive coloring of "The Spy." There still remains standing near Scarsdale the ruins of a chimney once within the Disbrow House, wherein the original of Cooper's Harvey Birch is said to have successfully hid from his pursuers.

At 30 years of age James Fennimore Cooper was following a quiet, commonplace existence, and no thought of a literary life had as yet entered his mind. One day while reading an English novel to his wife he half-jestingly remarked: "I believe I could write a better story myself." His wife was sure that he could and so encouraged the idea that he made the attempt. His initial work was "Precaution," a novel in two volumes, published anonymously in an inferior manner during the year 1820. This first novel was in no respects a sample of the author's talent. It dealt with high life in England, a subject with which the writer was personally unfamiliar, save through the pages of fiction, and while the venture can hardly be said to have enabled him to taste of the sweets of authorship, it had the effect of stimulating the desire to write. Its modest success caused his friends to urge him upon some more familiar theme, and remembering an interesting tale of a spy that he had heard some years before from the lips of John Jay, he set about putting it into a story. "The Spy" was the result and during the winter of 1821-22 the American public awoke to the fact that it possessed a novelist of its own, and the immediate success of the book, which was unprecedented at the time in the annals of American literature, determined Cooper's future career.

The next five years witnessed the publication of some of his best works, among them being "The Pioneers," "The Pilot," and "Lionel Lincoln." In 1826 his popularity had attained its zenith with the publication of "The Last of the Mohicans." But with fame came envy and uncharitableness from his contemporaries at home and abroad. English reviewers claimed him as a native, fixing his birthplace in the Isle of Man, and denounced him as a renegade. Naturally of a head-strong and combative disposition, he resented the accusations and insinuations thrust upon him and in so doing could not help but give offense to a large class.

His self-assertive manner made him enemies among men who could not understand his nature. He made frequent visits to England, during which his company was sought by the most distinguished men of the time, and during one of these visits he was unwillingly brought into a controversy over the economy and efficiency of the United States government. His utterances on this subject were misconstrued and his published letters brought forth what now seems an altogether unexplainable bitterness against their author.

As one of the most successful of authors, Cooper's fame is assured. His libel suits and controversies are forgotten, his offensive criticisms are seldom read, and he is remembered only as the most brilliant and successful of American novelists.

A lineal descendant.

An Englishman applied to the herald's college for a coat of arms. In such a case it is pleasant to be able to borrow one from a celebrated ancestor. The man in question could not remember anything about his great-grandparents, and therefore, of course, could not mention any achievement by them which could be used as the basis of a coat of arms. But the official to whom he applied was not easily discouraged.

"Have you not done something yourself?" he asked.

"Nothing, I fear," said the man, adding as a pathetic afterthought that once, having been locked in a Ludgate Prison for debt, he had found means to escape from an upper window.

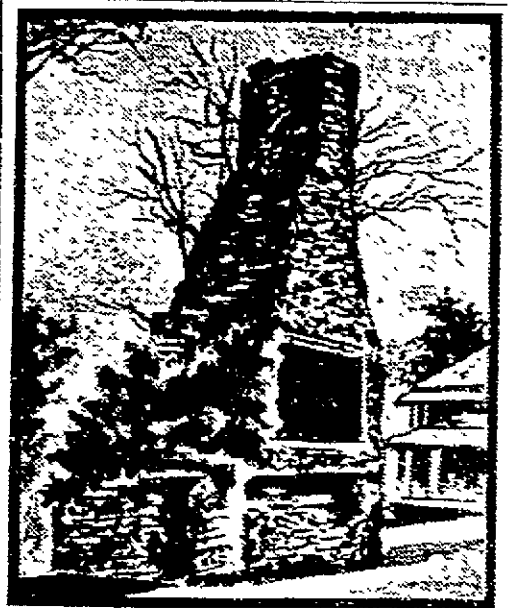

"And how did you get down?"

"I got a cord, fixed it around the neck of King Lud's statue, and let myself down."

"Just the thing! There you have it—honor enough. Lineally descended from King Lud. His coat of arms is good enough for you!"

marked: "I believe I could write a better story myself." His wife was sure that he could and so encouraged the idea that he made the attempt. His initial work was "Precaution," a novel in two volumes, published anonymously in an inferior manner during the year 1820. This first novel was in no respects a sample of the author's talent. It dealt with high life in England, a subject with which the writer was personally unfamiliar, save through the pages of fiction, and while the venture can hardly be said to have enabled him to taste of the sweets of authorship, it had the effect of stimulating the desire to write. Its modest success caused his friends to urge him upon some more familiar theme, and remembering an interesting tale of a spy that he had heard some years before from the lips of John Jay, he set about putting it into a story. "The Spy" was the result and during the winter of 1821-22 the American public awoke to the fact that it possessed a novelist of its own, and the immediate success of the book, which was unprecedented at the time in the annals of American literature, determined Cooper's future career.

the portraits of the red men who live in his pages. Such wild surroundings could not but stimulate a naturally active imagination and the influence of the wilderness, augmented afterwards by the somewhat similar influence of the sea, pervaded his entire life.

From a private tutor he received his earliest education and at the age of 13 entered the freshman class of Yale College. According to his own account, he learned but little at college. His love of out-of-doors freedom led him to neglect his books and he roamed about and explored the rugged hills northward of New Haven and the equally picturesque shores of Long Island Sound. Gradually he became wilder and more persistent in his defiance of academic restraints and was finally expelled.

Upon leaving his studies the love of activity and adventure laid hold on the youth and he decided to take up the life of a seaman. In 1806 he made his first voyage as a sailor before the mast on the ship Spartan, sailing from New York with a cargo of flour for foreign markets. After this he served for a time as midshipman on the Vesuvius and was later ordered to Oswego, N. Y., with a construction party to build a brig for service on Lake Ontario.

Then he was given charge of the gunboat Attila on Lake Champlain and was subsequently ordered to the Wasp. In 1811 he married a daughter of John Peter Delancey, of Westchester County, N. Y., and resigned his position in the navy to settle into a quiet, domestic life. In deference to his wife's wishes he built his home in Westchester County on what was known as the Angeline farm in the town of Scarsdale, in which locality many stirring events of the Revolution had taken place. The impressions gained from the historic associations surrounding him here were of inestimable value to him in the descriptive coloring of "The Spy." There still remains standing near Scarsdale the ruins of a chimney once within the Disbrow House, wherein the original of Cooper's Harvey Birch is said to have successfully hid from his pursuers.

At 30 years of age James Fennimore Cooper was following a quiet, commonplace existence, and no thought of a literary life had as yet entered his mind. One day while reading an English novel to his wife he half-jestingly remarked: "I believe I could write a better story myself." His wife was sure that he could and so encouraged the idea that he made the attempt. His initial work was "Precaution," a novel in two volumes, published anonymously in an inferior manner during the year 1820. This first novel was in no respects a sample of the author's talent. ### STRANGE ROBBERS.

Mystery on an Ocean Liner Explained at Last.

Not many weeks ago the newspapers published accounts of mysterious wholesale robberies on one of the ocean grayhounds plying between New York and Liverpool. The authorities on board ship exerted themselves to their utmost, but no clue to the offenders could be obtained. Stateroom after stateroom was entered and in nearly every case some valuable jewelry was extracted. Scotland Yard was summoned, but the most astute thief catchers of that celebrated agency failed to meet with any success. Later developments have thrown some light on the mystery. On board, receiving the constant attention of a lady and gentleman passenger, was a fine, large group of ostriches consigned to one J. N. Percival, Paris, France. The lady and gentleman, after the steamer landed, disappeared, as did the flock of feathered beauties. All trace of the birds was lost until the other day when they were unloaded at the docks at New Orleans. The tag, however, had been changed and one of the birds was missing. It turned out to be a most valuable bird, however, and the discovery was the work of a New York sleuth hound. At every visit to the hold of the steamer by the aforesaid lady and gentleman this particular ostrich was fed a jewel—either watch, diamond, ring or some other bright article purloined by this couple from the staterooms of their fellow passengers. This particular ostrich seemed to feast on jewelry. Be as it may, the bird's feathers adorn some Parisian, and the contents of its stomach await identification in the office of the Chief of Police of New Orleans. The lady and gentleman are in the hands of the Paris police who arrested them as they were about to sail for America after having reshipped the ostriches to New York. Having no reason to return the birds as the real culprit had been sacrificed on the other side, the society for the prevention of cruelty to ostriches sold them to the agent of the great Sells-Downs Shows, which will exhibit in Grand Rapids, Tuesday, July 22.

To The Stockholders and Patrons. Present and Prospective. Of The Electric and Water Company of Grand Rapids Wisconsin:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE:—That at a Regular Meeting of the Board of Directors held at the office of said Company, on the 10th day of July, A. D. 1902, the following resolution was duly passed and adopted:

Resolved by the Board of Directors that hereafter all persons, firms, or corporations are strictly prohibited from connecting any wires or electrical appliances of any nature or kind whatsoever with the lines of this Company, unless a permit in writing from the manager of the Company has been obtained, authorizing such connections; and no patron or stockholder of this Company shall be permitted to connect with the wire or the current furnished by this Company, any lamps, fan motors or other appliances whatsoever, unless they have been approved by the manager of this Company.

"And Be It Further Resolved, That all wiring of buildings must be done in accordance with the rules of this Company and National Board of Fire Underwriters, and that this Company will not connect its wires or electrical currents with any wires or electrical appliances in any building unless the wiring of such building has, during the course of constructing, been inspected by a competent employee of this Company, and hereafter a fee of ten cents, for every opening inspected, will be charged, and all other work will be performed at cost as heretofore. And this Company will hereafter absolutely refuse to connect with the wires or electrical appliances which are not up to the standard required by this Company.

Modern Woodmen Picnic at Ashland.

The Modern Woodmen picnic and convention, to be held at Ashland on July 30th and 31st, promises to surpass any affair of that kind ever held in Northern Wisconsin.

The jurisdiction has been extended so as to take in all of the north half of the state.

The Ashland Woodmen are sparing nothing to make it a decided success. Large prizes aggregating $1,000 will be given to bands, drill teams and to all kinds of sports.

Hon Robert M. LaFollette and Hon. David S. Rose will be present and take part in the program.

During the time of the picnic the Ashland Elks hold their carnival and the famous Boston-Ferrari Animal Show and Street Circus will be on the boards.

There will be about 10,000 people present.

Beside the band and drill contests, there will be excursions on Lake Superior, base ball games, log-rolling contests, games and sports for prizes, dances, and everything that goes to make a good time.

Woodmen and those desirous of attending should see their railroad agents and arrange for excursion trains.

Summer Train Between Chicago and Star Line. On Saturday of each week, special train will leave New Lisbon on arrival of the Pioneer limited train at New Lisbon, and return at 4:30 a. m. on Sunday. On Sunday, leaving New Lisbon at 10:30 a. m., Monday, reach New Lisbon in time to catch the Pioneer limited. On Monday, leaving New Lisbon at 10:30 a. m., Monday, reach Milwaukee at 1:00 a. m. Chicago at 1:00 a. m. Sleeping car service from and to Chicago on this train.

Why He Succeeds.

We are just in receipt of the annual catalogue of the Toland universities. It contains the most positive proof of excellence ever offered by any business college with which we are acquainted. To begin with, it contains the portraits of between five hundred and one thousand young people whom Mr. Toland has educated and sent to desirable positions. It also contains commendatory letters from some of the largest firms in the United States who now have in their employ Mr. Toland's graduates. The fact that any young man or woman is qualified to fill a position in actual business is a commendation for the school, but Mr. Toland goes further, he proves the excellence of his schools not by citing a single student in the employ of a firm or corporation, but by giving the portraits, positions occupied, by hundreds upon hundreds of his graduates. To illustrate, the Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. of South Bend, Ind., employs six of his graduates; the Great Northern R. R., twenty-two; Jno. Gund Brewing Co., fifteen, and hundreds of other institutions from two to five each. Further than this responsible persons attest that the demand for Mr. Toland's graduates is always in excess of the supply. To those desiring a business education no school offers as many and valuable inducements as the Toland universities and none stand so high in the estimation of those who have investigated their many advantages.

Mr. Toland is now the largest owner of business college property in the world, owning and operating schools at La Crosse and Wausau, Wis., Winona and Fairmont, Minn., Mason City and Oelwein, Iowa. A letter addressed to any of these cities, preferably La Crosse, will secure for those interested his catalogue, which in addition to containing the information desired by students is, typographically, a work of art.

Women will be able to vote at the fall election in Wisconsin, according to a decision just rendered by Attorney General Hicks. Their votes, however, will be confined to the constitutional amendment regarding raising the salary of the state superintendent of schools and the change in the time of electing that official from the general to the spring election. On these questions, which deal solely with school matters, the attorney general says the women have a right to register their votes.

Sections of Rudolph were visited by a heavy rain and hail storm on Sunday afternoon, and considerable damage was done by the hail in places. There were also indications of a rain here, but hardly enough moisture fell to lay the dust.

—Get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets at Johnson & Hill Co.'s or Wood County drug store. They are easier to take and more pleasant in effect than pills. Then their use is not followed by constipation as is often the case with pills. Regular size, 25c. per box.

John Bell, T. J. Cooper, LaFayette Porter, H. Wiperman, F. S. Woodworth, Claus Johnson and Theron Lyon left on Tuesday for Madison, where they will attend the republican state convention as delegates. Richard Wiperman also accompanied them as a spectator.

—The most intelligent and historical elephant on earth is Pooh-Bah, who ambles gracefully every day with the most beautiful women in the world, arrayed in queenly robes, sitting on a throne attached to the elephant's back in the great Sells-Downs parade. The Big Show will not be in Grand Rapids until Tuesday July 22.

Bert Brown received a letter from a friend at Dawson, N. D., on Saturday in which that gentleman offered to buy the hay from Mr. Brown's farm, offering him 50 cents a load for same. This is considered a good price out in that country but it would paralyze a farmer if he had to sell hay at that figure here.

A. P. Hirzy the optician has received a new instrument for the testing of eyes which is a great improvement over anything of the kind that has heretofore been invented. It is called an ophthalmoscope and retinoscope, and is just what the name signifies, being for testing the muscular condition of the eyes as well as the retina. With its aid the use of a dark room is entirely done away with, and as it can be placed on a ordinary table, it necessarily proves of great service to an optician.

—The King of Siam owns an army corps of 500 elephants, all well trained for military purposes, and under the command of a General. The smartest of these pachyderms was sold recently to J. M. J. Kane, General Foreign Agent of the Great Sells-Down Shows and performs daily in one of the rings. The Big Show will not be in Grand Rapids until Tuesday July 22.

—Money to loan. C. E. Boles.

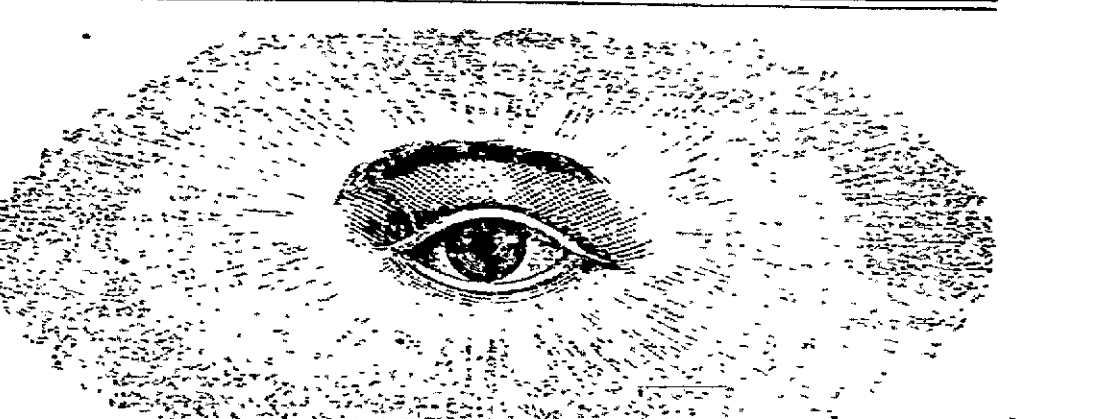

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Wood returned on Thursday last from Milwaukee, where they had spent a few days. While in Milwaukee Mrs. Wood met with a mishap that might easily have proven fatal, but from which she luckily escaped with only a few bruises. Mr. and Mrs. Wood had alighted from a car in front of the Plankington House and when she attempted to cross the street she was struck by a car coming from the opposite direction. The lady was knocked to the pavement but luckily escaped without any broken bones. Mr. Wood was with his wife, but being a few feet behind was not struck by the car.

WILL NEVER BE TRIED.

Probability that the Case of Mrs. O'Malley and William Hearin will be Dropped.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 12.—It is probable that the case of the commonwealth versus Mrs. Aline Ellis O'Malley and William J. Hearin, charged with the larceny of jewelry, which was pawned for $40, will never again figure in the courts. The two defendants, who were arrested here as they were about to elope, while Mrs. O'Malley's husband lay dangerously ill in this city, are now enjoying liberty under $1200 bail each, and have gone to their homes in New York.

All the rumors that Mrs. O'Malley would be charged with having administered arsenic to her husband have turned out to be the veriest moonshine, and since it has developed that an exceedingly bitter feud against her has existed in the O'Malley family for some months, public sympathy has veered around completely in her favor.

The declaration of Mrs. O'Malley's counsel, and other that the woman was persecuted and thrown into jail out of pure spite have had a marked effect. Nothing was brought out against her at any time except that she pawned certain jewelry said to have belonged to her brother-in-law, but which, it is claimed, she believed had a right to it for some reason not explained. It is believed here that she will be allowed to forfeit bail.

Her Spirit Broken.

New York, July 12.—Pretty Aline Ellis O'Malley is back in New York. A week inside the gloomy walls of Moramensing prison in Philadelphia has broken on her spirit and made her pale and thin. Her brother, O'Quinn Ellis, sent this bulletin to all inquirers: "Mrs. O'Malley is very ill, and will be confined to her room for several days. She has nothing to say, and when she recovers she will not allow to talk on an office of her counsel. All that her family desire to say concerning the treatment of Mrs. O'Malley in Philadelphia is that it was outrageous."

Young Hearin was asked: "When do you expect to see Mrs. O'Malley?" "I want to see her, but I will stick to her to the end," he said with a swagger, "and that I will see that justice is done to her. I feel very sore over the publicity the matter has received and the fuss that has been made about nothing. Mrs. O'Malley and I have been friends for years. The public doesn't know all, but maybe it will some day."

Hearin still keeps the two railroad tickets for South Bend and it would not surprise some of their friends if they would again attempt the trip so rudely interrupted by the police.

BANK TELLER SHORT.

Takes Money Deposited to Credit of Interest Accounts and Speculates in Wheat.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 12.—The German National Bank found its teller, Henry H. Brinker, short $17,000 in his accounts. He was speculating in wheat and hoped to make enough to repay the money before discovery.

He took in money deposited to the credit of interest accounts, which cannot be withdrawn without notice for a period of six months or a year. When new accounts were opened he would give the depositors pass books and enter the amounts of their deposits thereon. The deposit slips he would put in his pocket and make no entry of the accounts in the books of the bank. The defalcation was discovered when the depositors tried to withdraw their money. None appeared to his credit on the books of the bank.

The investigation which followed led to the finding of the shortage. Brinker was under bond to the amount of $15,000, given by the Mercantile Trust Company. He had been employed at the bank for sixteen years and had the confidence of the officers.

RESCUED AN ACTRESS.

Terry McGovern Saves Miss Moore from Drowning and is Rewarded with a Kiss.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 12.—Miss Maybelle Moore, daughter of W. H. Moore, a Chicago manufacturer and part owner and leading woman of the Hunter-Moore Stock Company, was saved from drowning by Terry McGovern, the punter.

Miss Moore was bathing near Heinzler and McGovern and some friends were swimming near by. She started to swim out to the buoy, a distance of four yards. When she neared the buoy she found herself in the undertow and was carried out to sea.

She called loudly for help and McGovern swam quickly to her, seized her under the arm and started back for shore.

Some of Miss Moore's friends got a lifeboat and rowed to the rescue. McGovern and his exhausted companion caught hold of the boat and both were taken ashore.

When Miss Moore learned who her rescuer was she put her arms around his neck and kissed him.

THE FRIARS' LANDS.

Vatican Desires to Continue Diplomatic Negotiations with the United States.

Rome, July 12.—There is apparently a disposition on the part of the Vatican to take advantage of the Philippine question to forward its desire for the establishment of diplomatic relations with the United States. The Vatican authorities hope that the question of the purchase of the Friars' lands and other matters involving the payment of money will render indispensable the continuance of relations initiated by Gov. Taft for at least two years, while they are also hopeful of reserving the question of the withdrawal of the Friars from the islands so as to proving these relations even longer.

A California Cherry Tree's Great Yield. D. C. Vestal, a pioneer orchardist of the Santa Clara valley, whose place is on the Berryessa road, leading out of San Jose, has a black Tartarian cherry tree which has made a record harvest. From it he has just finished taking a total of 1900 pounds of fruit. The cherries on this tree he sold at the rate of 10 cents per pound in Eastern markets, making the gross receipts $190. The tree is old, large and thrifty.—San Francisco Chronicle.

SHIPPING AT STANDSTILL.

Many Men Idle and Business Interests Paralyzed.

SITUATION IS GRAVE.

Losses Roughly Estimated at Over a Million Dollars a Day—Wholesale Houses Close Down.

Chicago, Ill., July 14.—The second week of the freight handlers' strike began today with 20,000 men idle and shipping at a standstill. The railroad warehouses, ordinarily hives of industry, were almost as quiet as they were yesterday, so far as regular business was concerned. At a distance from each warehouse was a company of pickets posted to keep freight from entering or leaving the sheds. Nearer the depots were guards of police, on duty to protect the men in the warehouses and to quell any disturbances which might arise.

Gangs of non-union men brought into the city to take the places of the strikers, lounged about the warehouses or in their cars with scarcely anything to do.

Wholesale houses make practically no attempt to send out freight or to receive it. These big establishments were all but closed down. The strike has cost them hundreds of thousands of dollars already and they stand to lose millions should the conditions which obtained this morning continue. The loss in wages to the striking freight-handlers and their sympathizers, the teamsters, to the railroad and other lines of business is roughly estimated at considerable over $1,000,000 a day. The situation is admittedly very grave.

Freight for Milwaukee Tied Up.

There was no business at the Goodrich steamship docks this morning. Men were on hand to take freight, but all they had to do was to sit around on benches and boxes awaiting delivery throughout the city.

We have had offers to carry an enormous amount of freight for big houses via Milwaukee for trans-shipment, said an officer of the company, "but we have refused them."

"We stand ready to attend to all business in the usual channels, but we do not care to complicate the situation. Had it not been for the fact that several teamsters violated their promises to the union pickets and used our roadway as a means of reaching the freight depots, we might still be doing a considerable business. No wagons can deliver goods to us now."

The teamsters at all the big stores showed up for city delivery work which was an improvement over Saturday when there was little delivery of any kind.

Must Deal with Union Now.

At 1:30 p. m. President Curran of the freight handlers gave out a statement in which he said: "All of the conferences today have failed, although we sent committees of their own men to the managers as they requested. Hereafter the managers will have to confer with officials of the union. If they want to waste $100,000 a day over a question of half a cent increase in wages we will let them try it."

Dispute Over Half a Cent.

Previous to meeting the committees the railroad managers and superintendents held a meeting among themselves. They remained of the mind that 17 cents is a proper compromise between the 16 cents paid and the 18 cents asked originally by the truckers. Of the managers' meeting F. A. Delano of the Burlington said: "We discussed the situation at length. We talked tentatively of the wage problem. We consider that we have performed our full duty to the public. Our freight houses and yards are now ready to go back to work they can do so. It is up to the people who have goods to ship to get them to the freight houses. That is the way we look at the situation."

Appeal Made to Governor.

During the past few days Gov. Yates has received communications from Chicago shippers and merchants who have perishable goods tied up at the different freight houses, asking if the state executive can offer them any relief. He has replied that he is powerless to help them in the matter.

The freight houses of all the railroads are tied up with freight that cannot be moved. Thousands of dollars' worth of fruit and vegetables consigned to South Water street merchants is spoiling, but the railroad managers say it is no fault of theirs. They are ready to unload it when the freight call for it. The commission drivers have absolutely refused to go near the depots and will haul only for city business.

COMMISSION MEN SUFFER.

Thirty Cars of Perishable Goods Remain on the Tracks.

Chicago, Ill., July 14.—Commission merchants on South Water street declared that usually animated market place is today a scene of desolation. The street is one of the most congested in the Caucasian world. Today in front of many of the stores there was not a wagon and scarcely a crate, box or barrel of produce. Some had a few berries brought by boat from Michigan and Wisconsin, but these were the only fresh arrivals. Thirty cars of highly perishable stuff was reported on the tracks while many more cars containing commodities, which will last a few days longer, lay abandoned. Of today's arrivals the rail only three wagons were cleared for promptly.

These contained live poultry. It was said that the humane society would not allow them to perish, and a permit was secured to take them to South Water street.

One wholesaler had a carload of Georgia peaches on sale. The peaches came in Saturday by rail, but the teamsters refused to haul anything from the railroads. The dealer thereupon shipped the car around the lake to St. Joseph, Mo., where the car was unloaded and the peaches were taken here by train.

President Field of the Knickerbocker Ice Company stated today that the ice men were hauling ice everywhere, including the railway depots and to cars. This was denied by some of the strikers.

Tons of Spoiled Vegetables.

Much fruit and vegetables which came in yesterday was re-shipped last night, and without adequate refrigeration. Vegetable and fruit peddlers succeeded in getting partial supplies from the depots during the day, but it was only after much trouble with the pickets and assistance from the police. Tons of half-spoiled stuff was given to poor people who waited at nearly all the depots in crowds, each one carrying a basket or bag.

Despite the assertion of President Field of the Knickerbocker Ice Company that ice was going to the freight houses, pickets asserted that not one cube of ice had passed through their lines this forenoon.

Conferences Come to Naught.

The conferences between committees of the men and the railroad managers came to naught. Even when President Curran told the committeemen to accept 17 1/2 cents, a modification of his earlier instructions, no progress was made. A man familiar with the employers' side of the fight said:

"The situation among the railroads is about this: The Western roads are swearing mad for the most part, and won't budge an inch; the Eastern people generally want more time to consider. I suppose this is because they have to do considerable conferring with New York, where most of them have their headquarters. The railroads claim to have enough men in their warehouses to handle all business brought to them. They stand to lose considerable, but it is nothing to what Chicago wholesalers are losing."

RIOT STAGE REACHED.

Strikers Become Disorderly and Several Men are Beaten.

Chicago, Ill., July 14.—The strike situation yesterday reached the riot stage and a peaceful settlement of the strike now seems further away than ever.

Three riots occurred in which one man was shot, five beaten, three truck wagons wrecked and a score of men clubbed by the police.

Longshoremen were organized into a union yesterday afternoon. They are now in sympathy with the freight handlers, but may inaugurate an independent strike of their own if a higher scale of wages for loading and unloading big lake boats is refused.

Ice handlers agreed not to unload ice from refrigerator cars or to visit the railroad yards. This is virtually a sympathetic strike.

The teamsters of Chicago officially entered the strike today, declaring that they would handle a pound of freight bound to or from any of the railroads.

Several Railroads Yield.

Eight railroads are said to be ready to grant the three points on which the strike hinges—namely, give up the probation period, pay overtime to men employed by the month, and grant truckers 17 1/2 cents an hour.

The railroad managers seen yesterday would not admit that they had authorized any one to give the impression to the strikers that they had in any way changed their position. In fact, they asserted that they were in the same frame of mind as yesterday, and would grant the scale posted July 1, and nothing more.

NOTED PRELATE DIES.

Archbishop Feehan, Head of the Chicago Diocese, Suddenly Passes Away.

Chicago, Ill., July 14.—Patrick A. Feehan, archbishop of the Roman Catholic province of Chicago, died at the archiepiscopal residence a little after 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Death is ascribed to heart failure, caused by an acute attack of indigestion. More than a year ago the archbishop, now 73 years old, had a severe case of pneumonia, which left his heart in a much weakened condition.

The services will be held in Holy Name Cathedral. He will be given all the honors due his station and the reverence which his people had for him. It is a difficult matter to make any forecast as to his future head of the diocese. The final action lies with the Pope, and he may make any appointment that he chooses. That is a matter that cannot be fittingly taken up until after the funeral and will not be discussed among the clergy.

The Probable Successor.

While priests refused to discuss the question, it is believed that the choice for an archbishop lies between two or three men of whom the most probable candidate seems to be the present coadjutor, Bishop Patrick J. Mullen. The death of the archbishop creates an unusual situation in the Roman Catholic Church of the United States. Following his death upon the death of Archbishop Corrigan of New York, the two largest archdioceses in the country are left without archbishops.

Sketch of Prelate's Life.

Archbishop Feehan was the first incumbent of the metropolitan see of Chicago, and has directed it in religious thought and financial policy for twenty-two years. He was born in Killinagh, Tipperary, Ireland, on August 29, 1841. From 1863 to 1874 he was a student at Castle Knock College, Ireland. From 1874 to 1876 was a student at the college of Maynooth, Ireland, preparing for the priesthood. In 1876 he accepted a call from Archbishop Kenrick of the St. Louis archdiocese and came to America. Was ordained a priest on November 1 in St. Louis. In 1874 he succeeded to the presidency of the seminary at Carondelet. In 1879 was appointed pastor of St. Michael's, St. Louis, and subsequently to the pastoral of the church of the Immaculate Conception. On November 1, 1885, was consecrated bishop and assumed the seat of Nashville, Tenn., having been thirty-two years a priest. In 1896 was a participant in the second international council of the Vatican. On November 25, 1898, became archbishop of the archdiocese of Chicago. In 1893 was summoned to Rome to participate in the deliberations surrounding the third plenary council of Baltimore.

No Need of a Will.

The diocesan property is estimated at over $4,000,000 which is almost entirely in the hands of the church. The only Catholic one in the United States in which the bishop is a corporation, and having been created since 1874 by special act of the Legislature. This renders unnecessary the making of a will by the archbishop. His secretary in office took to everything owned by the church.

His death was a surprise to his friends, who were expecting him to live for some time longer.

CHAFFEE ORDERED HOME.

Commander in Philippines Will Take Charge of the Department of the East.

Washington, D. C., July 14.—Gen. Chaffee has been relieved of command in the Philippines and ordered to the command of the department of the east by an order issued today by Secretary Root. The order reads as follows:

"By direction of the President, Maj. Gen. George W. Davis will relieve Maj. Gen. Chaffee of the command of the division of the Philippine Department. Gen. Chaffee will be relieved of his command in the Philippines and ordered to the command of the department of the east."

CORBETT UNDER THE KNIFE.

Pugilist Has a Cancerous Growth Removed from His Tongue.

New York, July 14.—The real reason for James J. Corbett's refusal to go to San Francisco for the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries fight has just become known. He has had to undergo an operation for a cancerous growth on his tongue caused by excessive smoking.

The condition of his tongue annoyed Corbett considerably in his training and it was decided some time ago by his physician that the use of "the knife" would be necessary.

LORD SALISBURY IS OUT.

British Prime Minister Offers Resignation and it is Accepted.

BALFOUR SUCCEEDS HIM.

Latter Confers with Chamberlain, Who Approves, but is Said to be Disappointed.

London, July 14.—The Marquis of Salisbury, who has been prime minister since June, 1895, has resigned that office. He will be succeeded in the premiership by A. J. Balfour, at present first lord of the treasury and government leader in the House of Commons. The following official communication was issued from Downing street:

On Friday last the Marquis of Salisbury had an audience of the King, and tendered his resignation, which was graciously accepted by His Majesty. The Marquis was then communicated with Arthur Balfour, who forthwith had an interview with Mr. Chamberlain. Mr. Balfour having then consulted with other members of the cabinet, was received by the King on Saturday at Buckingham palace, and accepted the post of prime minister vacated by Lord Salisbury.

England is Astonished.

Lord Salisbury's quiet laying down of the premiership amid the present commotion and rejoicings comes as a great astonishment to England. So little did the countrymen know of the momentous position which he had reached that all the Sunday newspapers, describing Gen. Kitchener's audience with the King Saturday afternoon, said that he was the first visitor outside the royal family and the doctors whom the King had received. There was not a hint that the King had received a resignation from his prime minister and appointed his successor.

In discussing Lord Salisbury's desire to resign after the coronation, it was pointed out that there was the greatest likelihood that Mr. Balfour would succeed him. His appointment is the line of least resistance.

The question on everybody's lips is: Where stands Chamberlain? The answer on full consideration, as that is would have been the greatest surprise to the political world if he had been selected as the official leader of the present cabinet, or to form one of his own in the existing situation.

Will be Explained.

The position so far as Lord Salisbury is concerned has been explained by him at a meeting of Conservative lords and commoners at the foreign office. He spent Sunday quietly at Hatfield house, where Gen. Kitchener is his guest. No doubt the reason he will give for his retirement will be old age. He can hardly be in the best health for he has been one morning a week ago trying to emerge from St. James park with his daughter, Geraldine.

Comment of the Thunderer.

The Times states that Lord Salisbury's resignation was not caused by any political differences with his colleagues in the cabinet and says: "We understand that the King was very anxious to mark in some special manner the high service of the great service Lord Salisbury has rendered to the state and expressed a desire to bestow upon the retiring minister some conspicuous promotion or decoration; but Lord Salisbury begged to be allowed to decline the proposal. He said that he was not in the least desirous of any honor, and that the King should bestow his honors upon his successor and that the retiring prime minister suggested Mr. Balfour. A message was thereupon sent from the palace to Mr. Balfour at the house of commons. Feeling that it was impossible to remain in the cabinet without success without having secured the concurrence and support of Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Balfour immediately drove to the colonial secretary's house and saw him in his sick room. We are in a position to state that he was not in the least cordial manner and that Mr. Chamberlain recognized that Mr. Balfour was the natural successor to the premiership and assured him of his entire support."

"The change in the premiership will certainly involve intricacy which might be avoided, but as the King is leaving town it is possible that some will be announced for some weeks. As no office is vacant except that of keeper of the privy seal, the present cabinet can carry on work as long as necessary, and Mr. Balfour has accepted no new office. He will not have to present himself to his constituents for reelection. It may be taken for granted that the Duke of Devonshire will lead in the House of Lords."

TRACY PENNED UP.

Officers Pursuing the Oregon Outlaw Now Believe They Have Him Surrounded.

Seattle, Wash., July 14.—A special of the Post-Intelligencer from Ravensdale, Wash., says: "Sheriff Hartman of Pierce county announced that he believed his men had secured the outlaw Harry Tracy, who is now confined in the vicinity of Enumclaw, and completely surrounded the territory in which Tracy is hiding. The combined forces of three sheriffs can now be brought into requisition at any moment upon short notice. The combined efforts of all forces are being directed against the capture of Tracy."

A special of the Enumclaw, Wash., says: "The man hunters are once again on the trail of Harry Tracy. At 10 o'clock last night the bloodhounds were placed on his track and after following for three-quarters of a mile lost in the dense brush the borders of Enumclaw leading from here to Buckley. The wires have been kept hot for two hours with messages to surrounding towns and it is believed that Tracy will be either killed or captured before very long. Tracy was seen at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon a mile and a half east of Enumclaw."

Backset in His Back.

Tacoma, Wash., July 14.—Harry Tracy, the escaped convict, is threatened by a greater danger than a sheriff's posse. He is suffering from a backset, a disease which is now contracted in the vicinity of Enumclaw, and completely surrounded the territory in which Tracy is hiding. The combined forces of three sheriffs can now be brought into requisition at any moment upon short notice. The combined efforts of all forces are being directed against the capture of Tracy."

MR. BALFOUR'S POLICY.

Newly-Appointed Premier Addresses Gathering.

FOR UNIONIST CAUSE.

Will Occupy but Cannot Hope to Fill Gap Made by Salisbury's Retirement.

London, July 14.—Following close upon the resignation of Lord Salisbury and the appointment of Balfour as premier comes the announcement that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has resigned as chancellor of the exchequer. These changes have been made with little or no effect on business, either public or private, and had no effect whatever on the stock exchange.

The new premier, when he entered the conference room of the foreign office, received quite an ovation. All stood up and cheered the new chief. Mr. Balfour referred to the loss of the services of the chief, who for nearly fifty years, had been engaged in active political life. No one, he said, would grudge him his well-earned repose, though his loss was irreparable.

Will Occupy the Gap.

"I do not flatter myself," proceeded the premier, "that the gap he has left can be filled. But the place he has left must be occupied and it is because the King has desired me to take that position that I have asked you to meet me today. I have accepted a great task and a heavy responsibility. I have not had the opportunity before of consulting you, but I have, of course, consulted those with whom I have been working in the cabinet these many years and if the kindness you are prepared to extend to me is at all equal to the kindness they have extended to me, then indeed the task of the cabinet will be greatly lightened."

"I cannot now promise myself that I shall have the continued assistance of all my colleagues. One of the most important of them with whom I have been associated all my political life and who has been a faithful and devoted colleague in regard to the cabinet is Mr. Chamberlain, and he has told me that I cannot count on his further assistance. I mean the chancellor of the exchequer. But though I grieve to say I cannot count with any assurance on his further assistance, I can count with absolute confidence on his good wishes in the labor that are before me."

Uphold Unionist Policy. "For myself," continued Mr. Balfour, "I have nothing to say. To the members of the House of Commons who are listening to me I have no secrets and no surprises. Changes there must be, but I have met here to deplore. But this is not the occasion on which either to discuss them or even think of them. As for the question of policy I need hardly tell you that the policy of the Unionist party remains unchanged. I have lost the services of a brilliant advocate of our cause. We have lost a man around whom the sentiments and emotions of the party have for many years crystallized. Nevertheless I feel we would do wrong to have our faith in the future of our country shaken by the loss of a man who has so long and so well upheld. If we preserve the unity in the future which has never been wanting in our ranks in the past the inherent vitality of our cause will make up for any weakness in the arms which have to sustain it."

UNMARRIED BUT NOT MATED

"Dare," strange word, madame. Do you intend to defy your husband? My good friend here can do what he pleases within and without the Court once he is the ostensible possessor. Perhaps when you think the matter calmly over you will come to the conclusion that it would be more advantageous to reside there yourself, painful as its associations may be."

"She looked at the face of her antagonist. For one instant her courage seemed to fail; for one instant the light and strength and defiance faded out of her face, and her voice broke forth in a woman's last resource—appeal."

"What harm have I ever done to you," she cried pitifully, "that you should persecute me thus?"

"Madame," he said, with a low bow, "I do not persecute you. Far from it. I am but an instrument of Fate, and I would advise you for the best, if you would only allow me. But, like so many of your charming sex, you are impatient, you are self-willed, you will not listen to reason. You have chosen to look upon me as an enemy; you will not believe that I am your friend."

"No," she interrupted, with a return of the old indignation, the old proud defiance, "from friendship, Count Savona, is little less dangerous than your enmity." She moved away unsteadily, in an odd, dazed fashion, like one in a dream. Indeed, in looking back in the after days, this scene did seem to her like a dream—an evil one enough, with a nightmare-like horror attending upon it that filled her mind with terror.

"The Count followed her to the door. 'I will see you down the stairs,' he said, politely."

She shuddered, and drew back as if he were some noxious thing.
"No," she cried, impulsively. "There is no need. I—I mean I have a cab waiting."

"Very well, madame," he said, and bowed, and returned to the room, leaving her to make her way alone down the dark and narrow stairs.

As she reached the first landing something dark and shadowy seemed to shrink back into its gloomiest corner; something that in her perturbed state of mind she scarcely noted. She reached the outer door, and for a moment stood alone on the threshold, while the rain fell in plashing, noisy sheets, and the wind moaned and whistled around the dreary houses, and the dreary street.

The driver, sitting shivering on his box, noted that hesitation, that upward glance at the windows, that utter indifference to the discomfort of the elements, so significant of a preoccupied mind. And some one else noted it, a solitary figure, bronzed and worn-looking—passing through the street. Perhaps the fact of his so noticing it, or some instinct or impulse impossible to define, stayed his hurrying steps, and led him to approach the cab and the grumbling driver.

He laid his hand on the handle to open the door for the lady—he felt she was a lady even before the low sweet voice murmured scarce conscious thanks for the service done. Something in that voice seemed to startle him as he heard it. He leaned forward eagerly.

"It is—it can't be. Why, yes—if it isn't the blessed little gentleman's mother!"

"Tom!" she cried, and her hands went out to seize his own, and her white face looked up to him in the flickering lamplight. "Tom, is it really you? Here—"

"It is, ma'am. Here I am back again, like a bad shilling, and after such a fight for dear life with those Mexican savages as ne'er a soldier in this here blessed old England ever dreams of."

"And—and your master?" she faltered, wondering why all that mountain of trouble seemed to be rolled from her heart and her life, at the bare thought of the proximity of that one most faithful friend.

"My master's very ill, ma'am," said Tom gravely. "It was just life and death, and those foreigners they didn't know what to do with him, and none of them could fetch the bullet out, and some say it's in his lungs, and some it's in his shoulder, and some it's in his side. And so, one day they says to me, 'Take him to England,' and what with prize money and one thing or another, I scraped enough for his passage, and I worked my own and—well, here we are."

"And you've been with him always—you've never left him all these years—you good, faithful Tom!"

Now was weeping now, weeping softly and unrestrainedly in this mingled gladness and sorrow that had come to her.

"Of course, I've been with him, ma'am. You told me as how nothing I could do to serve you would be half as much to you as if I was a true friend to Mr. Grant, and I'd lay down my life for him, ma'am, that I would—cheerful—any moment that would serve him."

"I'm sure you would, Tom—oh, I'm sure you would."

She was sobbing so passionately that it hurt him to hear her, and the impatient cabman growled out an interrogation to know how much longer he was to wait.

"Don't take on so, ma'am, don't," entreated Tom. "Mr. Grant is sure to live. He's stronger than you think, and I'll write to you, ma'am, if you'd like to hear, and tell you how he gets on, and—"

"Yes, do, Tom—do," she cried, dashing the tears away from her eyes. "And look here—!" She thrust a handful of gold and silver into his hands. "Take that, Tom. You must—indeed, you must, and get him medicine, wine—anything he needs. He won't know and he won't question; but, oh, Tom, he mustn't die—my last friend, my only friend. Oh, heaven will not be so cruel as to take him from me!"

"No, ma'am, not a bit of it," said Tom, cheerfully; "he ain't a-goin' to die, never you fear. And now, where am I to tell this growling old idiot, who's so afraid of wetting his precious clothes, to drive you?"

"The Charing Cross Hotel," she said,

and Tom touched his hat and withdrew from the cab window, and made a mental note of the address, little dreaming how soon and how strangely that scene was to be recalled to his memory.

Meanwhile, in that dusky, dreary room upstairs, the two men were congratulating themselves on the success of their schemes. It was close upon midnight when the Count rose to say good night.

The solitary occupant of the room locked away his papers, paused a moment or two to make some entries in his memorandum book, then drew his chair near to the fire, and bent over it, rubbing his cold, thin hands together for warmth.

"A hard fight," he muttered to himself, "a hard fight; but I've got the best of it, after all. I never feared a woman yet, and I'm not to be beaten by one, no, nor the cleverest, or the—"

What checked the sentence on his lips? What suddenly seemed to chill his blood like ice, and stop the beating of heart and pulse in one second's space of deadly fear? He had heard no sound of opening door, or approaching footsteps, yet something was certainly standing behind him. The firm, nervous pressure of a hand was upon his shoulder. As his eye rested on that hand, he seemed to recognize in its brown, lean, slender fingers a sentence of doom long threatened and long defied, yet never, even amidst such defiance, quite forgotten, or quite unfeared.

There was a moment's breathless silence, yet a moment that seemed to hold an eternity of memory in its brief pause. The candles burning on the table had burned down so low that their sudden extinction was scarce perceptible, and in the deserted streets the rising wind gave one long, sad moan like the last cry of a suffering soul. Was it echoed by another, or was it only fancy that repeated it?

The darkness and quietness of the room had scarcely been disturbed by sound or struggle. The paralysis of fear that held that silent figure in its grasp, nerveless and immovable, seemed to hold it there still. Only it no longer leaned towards the fire, but lay back in its chair with ashy face and wide and staring eyes, and on the bare wood floor something fell with a monotonous, dripping sound.

The room is full of shadows. Has one of them life, that it moves so stealthily through its darkest corners to the door? So light it is, and so noiseless in its movements, that neither sound nor echo betrays its presence.

The room is dark and quiet as ever; the night falls with storm and rain over the great city beyond; but once again, like pitying things, the shadows close around that solitary figure which now is voiceless, powerless as themselves.

CHAPTER XX.
The sun has broken gallily forth, and driven away the rain clouds, and over the London streets and London houses he pours out his beams in a perfect flood of radiance.

He pours them, too, on all the dingy dusky houses around Lincoln's Inn Fields, making them look only darker and dingier by reason of such generosity, and the broad rays flit higher and higher, and peep through cobwebbed windows and play at hide-and-seek in mysterious passages, and seem to mock the frowning houses that look so close and grave and dismal, as if they were standing tombstones of men's secrets and men's lives, as perhaps they are.

And following the sunbeams comes the old crow who has charge of the chambers, and looks after her solitary lodger. She comes in armed with brooms and brushes and goes to the window and draws up the blind and in rush the sunbeams like live things at play and race and chase each other through the room, in very mockery of what their presence brings to light.

The old woman does nothing to the chamber that day; but the brooms and brushes fall with a hideous clatter, and the quiet house and the quiet street seem alive in a moment with shrieks of terror and tread of feet.

The news spreads far and wide; spreads only by the utterance of one hideous, whispered word—a word that carries its own weight of terror along with it—a word that travels far and near throughout that day and brings investigation, surprise, questions, wonder, all in its train, and so leads on from point to point, from theory to theory, from evidence to proof, from shadow and impalpable at first, but growing and strengthening and widening the circle of its condemnatory history as a pebble thrown into still water widens the circle whence it first touched that water's surface.

The majesty of the law is at work again on behalf of John Marsden, and the mighty engine works faster and surer now than it did, or seemed to do, when he was a living man to benefit—not a dead man to be avenged. At the close of the previous day the living man had sat in his solitary chamber brooding over the wealth and prosperity in store for him; the close of this day sees only a dumb, helpless form lying stark and straight upon its narrow couch, over whom no tears are shed, no loving memories cherished, and whose fate will be briefly summed up by a coroner's jury.

This was the evidence collected by the intelligent member of the force, X 57, after the discovery of the body by the old woman who attended on John Marsden.

First, that the body had been stabbed in the back; second, that the wound had been caused by some long and narrow instrument—probably a dagger; third, that the deceased had been visited in his rooms the evening of the murder by two people—a man and a woman—the man a foreigner, who was in the habit of coming very frequently to see the deceased; the woman, a stranger, closely muffled, who came in a cab, stayed for some quarter of an hour or twenty minutes, and then went away in the same cab.

The intelligent member of the force had pricked up his ears at the sound of a foreigner—it fitted in with the dagger wound. A burglar or a robber would not have had such a weapon in his possession; the intelligent, therefore, made a note of this and proceeded to act upon his suspicions. The name of this foreigner? The woman did not know—had never heard it, to her knowledge—knew he was a foreigner because he looked like one—had overheard her master call him Count.

The Count is found. He is shocked; he is grieved. He is desolated and astounded at the awful occurrence. Inwardly in a very raging fury of baffled wrath and vengeance. All his schemes to end thus! His careful plans, his beautifully arranged project to be foisted at the very moment of completion! Ah, could all the oaths in the Italian language, or any other language he knew, relieve his feelings or chain back the demagogical rage in his breast? He tried them inwardly as a sedative. But he was outwardly very calm, very dignified, very collected. His evidence was the most important yet brought forward.

The wife of the deceased called on her husband at his rooms on the evening of the 16th of January. She came to bring some papers necessary to the establishment of her claim to this property—papers she had hitherto refused to produce. She and her husband were disputing violently when witness came on the scene. Subject of dispute? The husband asked his wife to return to him, and she refused to do so.

How did the dispute end?
The wife made use of some threats and left, still declaring her resolve that she would not return and live under her husband's roof—unless forced to do so.

They telegraphed to Vaux Abbey for Mrs. Marsden's address. Answer prepaid. More delay—more conjectures. The intelligent keeps still that watchful guard over the foreign Count, convinced in his own mind that he is deeper than ever. In the course of time a telegram arrives from Vaux Abbey: "Mrs. Marsden is at the Charing Cross Hotel."

Messenger dispatched to Charing Cross Hotel. Returns with Mrs. Marsden, to whom the intelligence has been communicated. How does she behave? No scene, no tears, no hysterics. Only a sad-faced, quiet woman, who hears what is required of her, and answers all questions asked, readily and composedly.

Verdict found:
"Wildful murder, against some person or persons unknown."

SAME RACE AS OF OLD.

Leaders of Crusades Would Be "Captains of Industry" To-Day.

To-day we are the same race, with the same impulse, the same power, and because there is no longer a frontier to absorb our surplus of energy, because there is no longer a wilderness to conquer, and because we still must march, still must conquer, we remember the old days when our ancestors before us found the outlet for their activity checked, and, rebounding, turned their faces eastward, and went down to invade the old world. So we. No sooner have we found that our path to the westward has ended than, reacting eastward, we are at the old world again, marching against it, invading it, devoting our surplus of energy to its subjugation.

But, though we are the same race, with the same impulses, the same blood-instincts as the old Frisian marsh people, we are now come into a changed time and the great work of our century is no longer war but trade.

Or, if you choose, it is only a different word for the same race-characteristic. The desire for conquest—say what you will—was as big in the breast of the most fervid of the crusaders as it is this very day in the most peacefully disposed of American manufacturers. Had the Lion-Hearted Richard lived to-day he would have become a "leading representative of the Amalgamated Steel companies" and doubt not for our moment that he would have underbided his Manchester rivals in the matter of bridge girders.

Had Andrew Carnegie been alive at the time of the preachings of Peter the Hermit, says Frank Norris, in the World's Work, he would have raised a company of gens d'armes sooner than all of his brothers-in-arms, would have equipped his men better and more effectively, would have been first on the ground before Jerusalem, would have built the most ingenious siege engine and have hurled the first cask of Greek-fire over the walls.

Ammonia Over a Telephone.

"Well," said Druggist Henry Rapp a few days ago, "I have heard people call up places over the telephone and ask to 'see' certain parties, but that isn't a marker to what I heard yesterday. A woman came into my store and, stepping to the telephone, called up Mrs. Isaacs, on one of the hilltops. While she was talking, my clerk, who was cleaning some bottles, poured a lot of ammonia upon a sponge and the odor filled the store."

"Imagine my surprise when I heard the woman at the telephone exclaim: 'Mrs. Isaacs, are you cleaning house?' There was an interval for the answer, which was followed by the woman saying: 'Why, I thought you was. I can smell ammonia so strong.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Humane Work in Porto Rico.

One of the natural results of the introduction of American authority in Porto Rico appears in an active movement for the prevention of cruelty to animals. In San Juan, Ponce and smaller communities the bearing of horses has been vigorously discouraged, and the last measure enacted at the recent session of the legislative assembly was an act to prohibit cock fighting.

Usury of Moscow Resident.

In Moscow a money lender, the owner of several houses and stables, was sentenced recently to four months' imprisonment for lending money at the enormous rate of 182 per cent.

An Automatic Tank Valve.

Regulating the flow of water into troughs and tanks is something which causes farmers more or less anxiety and trouble. In the plan as illustrated, the water pipe enters near the top of the tank, which places the valve out of water, thus relieving it of all danger from rust or the collection of sediment. Such a valve may be bought at any hardware store. The pipe may enter nearer the bottom of the tank and if the valve is kept clear the device will still serve its purpose. Another point in its favor is that, if desired, the valve can be closed just as effectively when the tank is one-fourth full as when filled to the brim.

The lower half of the long, jointed lever connecting the valve and float has a shorter one attached to it, the upper end of the latter having a number of holes in it. By having a hole in the upper half of the jointed lever and using a pin, the angle at the joint can be changed at will. Making it as large as possible will necessitate the float being lifted near the top of the tank before the valve is entirely closed, but by decreasing the angle the valve will be closed, while the float is still near the bottom. A sealed can or bottle makes a good float. A board or block of wood soon becomes soaked, and in consequence its lifting power is greatly diminished.—A. L. Williams, in Farm and Home.

To Prevent Soil Washing.

Soil washing, to a greater or less extent, takes place on 75 per cent of rolling farms, according to one writer. Where it occurs the very best surface soil is washed into the valleys, leaving the bare and much less productive clay on higher land. As a certain portion of all farms must be kept under grass it is advisable to allow steep inclines to remain in blue grass or some form of meadow. Such places furnish a good location for trees. These will not only prevent washing, but will tend to modify the climate by affording protection to stock and checking the heavy winds at all seasons of the year. In any case these slopes furnish excellent sheep pasture so that the land may be made quite as profitable as any that is under the plow. Where it is necessary to cultivate hillsides it is a good plan to plow under coarse manure, as this will prevent washing. In some instances it may be necessary to throw brush into the gullies and stake it down.—Iowa Homestead.

Feed Trough for Young Pigs.

One of the difficulties in feeding young pigs is seeing that each has a fair share of the slop. At the ordinary trough the stronger pigs will drive the weaker ones off and they fail to get enough food to keep up their growth. A trough designed to accommodate eight small pigs is eight-cornered and is made of inch lumber. The sides slant about as those of the ordinary V trough. A spout is fastened in the middle, into which the slop is poured, which runs down into the trough. To make this trough first construct a bottom sixteen inches in diameter. Nail two-by-four pieces around the bottom and use ten-inch boards for the sides, nailing them securely. No. 12 wire is stapled around the top and also around the outside, about three inches down from the top. Nail stout braces from the center spout, about seven inches from the bottom, up to every other corner of the trough, making four braces and giving between each room for two small pigs to feed.—Indianapolis News.

What Pays?

The cows on many farms would be considered first-class producers if each cow's product amounted to 200 pounds of butter per year, yet it is claimed by some of the best dairymen that 200 pounds of butter per year from a cow does not pay. Those who aim to make the most butter from their herds have the standard up to 300 pounds per year, and some fix the limit higher. Every farmer can have the individual members of his herd reach that amount by breeding for better cows every year.

When Horses Bolt Their Food.

Horses that are greedy and inclined to bolt their food should be fed grain in a wide bottomed manger, and even then it is well to place a few large pebbles in the bottom the size of a man's fist or larger. This compels slower eating and secures better mastication.

Propagating Grape Vines.

To layer a grapevine to obtain new vines to set of some choice variety, let a branch run until there can be about six feet of it placed on the ground. Then pinch off the end, which will throw the growth into the buds along the cane. When these are well under way place it in the soil about two, or three inches deep in a trench about four inches deep. In a few weeks the trench may be filled level with the surface. By fall there will be roots from every joint, and they may be separated from the parent stem and from one another and transplanted where they are wanted. This is less trouble and more sure than growing them from slips, which should be cut in the fall after the leaves drop, and heeled in. The tops incline toward the north, at some place where they will be sheltered and not molested during the winter. If well-ripened wood of this year's growth is used, and one or two buds left above ground, with another below, most of them will be found to have rooted in the spring. If one has but a parent vine of a good sort, or can get the branches that his neighbor cuts off when he cuts back in the fall, he can soon start a vineyard at no cost but a little labor.—American Cultivator.

To Kill Cabbage Worms.

One who knows says that hot water at 140 degrees applied with a sprinkler will kill the worms and will not hurt the plants. But be careful not to apply it at a temperature much higher than 140 degrees. The condition of the wind and weather at the time and the distance the water travels from the sprinkler to the cabbage all must be considered. It is possible to cook the cabbage with water at 150 degrees, and it is possible to use water at 200 degrees without damage. Paris green and London purple can be successfully and safely used in fighting cabbage worms. The best way to apply these impalpable powders is to put one part of Paris green or one and a half parts of London purple to 100 parts of flour and dust it on. For this purpose a dust sprayer is convenient. For small gardens an insect powder sprayer is the thing. There is no danger from these poisons, as the leaves dusted are not the ones eaten. They should not be used on plants used as greens.—Farmers' Guide.

Keep the Cow's Tail Clean.

The simple device here illustrated can be used in nearly every cow stable to keep the tails clean and prevent the cows from switching during milking in fly time. A piece of heavy cord, with a loop in each end, is fastened above the cow at a and the other end slipped around her tail as shown. When she lies down, this will keep her tail out of the gutter and filth. When about to milk, hang the cord over a beam or hook at b, which will pull the tail above harm's way.—New England Homestead.

Killing Peach Tree Borers.

For the last eight years I have set peach trees every year, and I never fail to make a thorough application of the tar. With an old paint brush I put it upon the trunk of the trees before setting, spreading the tar from the roots up the trunk from eight to twelve inches. I am careful to remove any borers that may be in the trees, as they come from the nursery. I keep in mind this fact that the coal tar will not kill the borer, deeply buried under the bark, but will prevent the moth from depositing its eggs at the base of the tree. The application of the tar must be made annually thereafter, being sure to finish the work before the moth begins to fly, which I believe is from June 1 to 15, usually. In making these annual applications it is necessary, to insure success, that the earth be removed down to the roots. The bark from the roots up eight to twelve inches must be completely covered with the tar.

In case the tree is suffering from the effects of the shot-hole borer or fruit-bark beetle, I know of nothing that is equal to the coal tar as a remedy. In case of mechanical injury to a tree the tar is better than any paint or wash we have ever tried.—O. J. Farmer.

Tar Preparations for Mange.

A bulletin from the Nebraska experiment station strongly advocates dipping with coal tar preparations to cure mange in cattle. The author claims that the liberal use of dips will lessen abortion in range cattle, which, he holds, is often due to weakness resulting from mange.

Agricultural Notes.

Muskmelon blight has become troublesome in some localities.

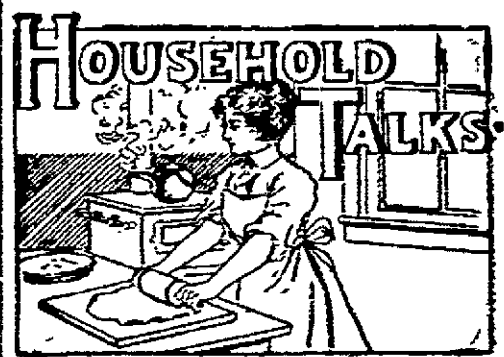

In cultivating onions care should be taken not to work the soil to the bulbs or to hill them.

In seeding sour (acid) land to timothy lime should be thoroughly worked into the soil before the seed is sown.

For late strawberry crops a northern exposure, clay soil and late varieties are recommended by the New Jersey station.

How long to keep a cow depends upon her work. Age should be given no consideration as long as the old cows are giving a profit.

All varieties of grapes may be propagated by layering, and many, like Norton Cynthiana, Scuppernon and other hard wooded aestivalis varieties, cannot easily be propagated otherwise.

Rhubarb Cream.

Take two pounds of green rhubarb which has been peeled and cut into small pieces, put into a saucepan with three cups of water and cook until it is soft enough to mash into a pulp; strain through a fine sieve and measure; to every pound of fruit add a pound of sugar and stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved, then boil for twenty minutes. Put an ounce of gelatine to soak in a cupful of cold cream, and when soft dissolve over hot water. Let it cool, add the cream and juice of one lemon, stirring constantly, and turn into a glass or earthen mold and place in a cold place to set for at least two hours; serve with whipped cream or a compote of figs, prunes or oranges.

Shredded Codfish Cakes.

The shredded codfish put up in tin boxes is a blessing to those who dislike the annoyance of preparing the fish in the old-fashioned manner. Take half of a one-pound can of the shredded fish and wash in two waters, then cover with a liberal quantity of warm water and let stand for half an hour; squeeze out the water, separate the particles of fish, and add to it half a pound of warm mashed potatoes. Whip these together lightly, add a saltspoonful of white pepper, two ounces of butter, and the yolks of two eggs well beaten; work all together, and with floured hands shape the mixture into dainty little cakes; drop them in smoking hot fat and fry to a golden color.—Cook.

Salad.

One way of using up scraps of cold meat is to take small quantities of chopped beef, ham or veal and potatoes. Mix the meat and potatoes together and season with salt, pepper and mustard and a small onion chopped fine. Take the yolk of three hard-boiled eggs to a medium-sized dish of salad and mash them fine. Mix a spoonful of melted butter and half a cup of vinegar with them, then mix through the meat. Pile on a salad dish and garnish with the whites of the eggs cut in rings.

Spanish Mackerel.

Broil the mackerel on both sides; place it on a hot platter and make the following sauce: Beurre Noir—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; when melted add one tablespoonful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Boil up once and turn over the fish.

Chicken Jelly.

A young chicken nicely prepared, cut up into small pieces, put in a saucepan with three pints of water, cooked rather slowly, removing the grease from the top continually. Allow it to cook for about five and a half hours, season to taste with salt, pepper, celery and parsley; when finished, stand aside to cool for some hours, then skim the grease off the top and serve either hot or cold.

Creamed Potatoes.

Cut cold boiled potatoes into small dice. Cover them with milk and boil up once or twice. Season with pepper, salt and butter. Remove to one side and thicken with a little flour and water. Creamed potatoes may also be prepared by first boiling the small squares, then turning the milk on while they are hot, and continuing in the same way as above.

Taffy.

One pound of Demerara sugar, five ounces of fresh butter, one dessertspoonful of vinegar or the juice of a lemon. Put into an enameled pan on a clear slow fire and stir constantly. Let it boil about ten minutes; then pour a little on a wetted plate, and if it hardens quickly it is done. Pour into shallow dishes or tins which have been wetted with cold water.

Preserved Cherries.

Cherries may be preserved either with or without the stones. Many think the stones add to the flavor. To each pound of cherries allow one-third of a pound of sugar. Put the sugar in the kettle with half a pint of water to three pounds of sugar; stir until it is dissolved; when boiling add the cherries and cook three minutes. Then put in the jars.

Brief Suggestions.

Tough meat can be made tender by laying it a few minutes in vinegar before it is cooked.

When a candle—wax, sperma or paraffin—is too large to put on the candlestick, dip the end in hot water for a few moments, to melt down to the required size.

When ironing, remember to rub the hot iron lightly over a piece of ordinary yellow soap, and the clothes will look much nicer and the work will be done much quicker.

Fruit stains may be removed from linen as follows: Tie up some cream of tartar in the stained part and let it boil in soapsuds for a few minutes. Then wash and rinse in clear water and the stain will be gone.

To clean rusty irons have a little salt and a little beeswax tied up separately in a bit of cloth and rub the iron first with the one containing salt, then with the beeswax. This should be done each time the irons are heated for use and the ironing will be better and more quickly done in consequence.

RUDOLPH.

(Too late for last week.)

The Catholic school gave a grand entertainment on the third of July. Four pupils graduated, they being George Blair, Mary Reusch, Anna Johnson and Josie Johnson.

Everybody get ready for there will be another big dance the 18th, given by Johnny Hassell and Benny Benson. Ice cream and lemonade will be served at Mr. Logan's.

C. Daly has a number of men working on his farm, making hay. The hay is so thick and heavy that they get a big load out of four cocks of hay.

Will Denkie, who has spent the past six months in Milwaukee, returned home for the Fourth. He received a warm welcome from his many friends.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church met at Mrs. John Conlath's Thursday afternoon. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Smith of Stevens Point were the guests of Mr. Ratelle and family last Saturday and Sunday.

Geo. Meed, Mr. La Baytoo and daughter Bell are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Lavaque.

Francis Lavaque, who is employed at Chicago, was to see his parents last Friday and returned Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Akey drove to Junction City Sunday to see Mrs. Akey's sister, Mrs. Grasshorn.

Mrs. George Timian and son, Leslie, are visiting at the home of her brother, Frank Whitman.

Johnny Bates and daughter, Jennie, and George Cooper, jr., spent their Fourth at Kaukauna.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant and Mr. and Mrs. Protteau spent the Fourth with Mr. and Mrs. Codere.

Henry Reimler took a trip down to Milwaukee, to be the guest of his sister, last Thursday.

Miss Laura Provost and Mrs. Frank Sharkey returned from a short visit at Tomahawk.

Mrs. Redlick spent the Fourth with her parents at New Lisbon, returning last Saturday.

Mr. Adams of your city was a caller at a number of homes Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. N. Ratelle is taking a vacation, visiting at Junction City and Stevens Point.

Mrs. John Granger has returned home from a few days' visit in your city.

Frank Matthews is engaged on the Slattery farm for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill are rejoicing over the birth of a baby girl.

Mrs. Alice of Kaukauna is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Cooper.

John Lindahl is the happy possessor of a new Osborne mower.

Mrs. Fred Logan was visiting her parents at Mather last week.

George Hamm was in this vicinity last Tuesday on business.

P. Keyzers was in Grand Rapids on business Wednesday.

Will Bratton of Minocqua was home to spend the Fourth.

Lem La Haie spent Sunday at the Whitman residence.

Pet Codere is at home this week.

On July 6th an interesting entertainment was given by the pupils of St. Joseph's Catholic school of Rudolph, at the closing of which diplomas were presented to the following by Rev. A. Van Sever: Misses Anna and Josie Johnson, Mary Perch and Geo. Blair. After a salutatory spoken by the graduates, Miss Almira Blair delivered a very fine essay on "Virtue and Science." She also acquitted herself very creditably in taking the part of Aunt Peabody in a dialogue; so did the two Misses Johnson and Emma Corner. The singing was very fine, too, the principal solo singers being the Misses Alice Akey and Mary Perch and Master Noel Crotteau. Some good comical pieces were spoken by Miss Josie Johnson and Masters Joe Vadaas and Raymond Crotteau. Miss Celia Vadaas delivered a very fine valedictory, the subject being "The Rainbow."

After this, about sixty premiums were distributed by Rev. A. Van Sever. He also gave a very fine speech. He said, in part, referring to a recitation that had been spoken, that we are all sculptors whose works may surpass the finest works of art, for we carve, not on inanimate marble, to which each day, each moment even, we may add new tints of beauty that will last for eternity. The school had done much for the graduates and young teachers, its education had given them a good start in life, but now it depended on themselves to continue and perfect the work.

Mrs. P. Keyzers departed Monday noon for Milwaukee, to be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. F. Phillips and Mrs. F. Steinfield of De Pere will tend to the house while she is absent.

Francis Granger of Stevens Point died on Sunday at his home in Stevens Point. He was the father of Mrs. Walter Reeve of this town. The funeral will be held on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Horner of Tomah were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Logan the latter part of last week. Mr. Horner departed Monday, but Mrs. Horner will prolong her visit.

Dr. Looze was up in this burg Tuesday, attending Mrs. Thomas Provost who was taken suddenly ill Monday night.

Miss Angeline Juneau and Mr. Ray of Sherry were united by marriage at 9 o'clock at the Catholic church.

Misses Laura Provost, Rose Ratelle and Angeline Juneau were in the city shopping on Saturday.

A heavy rain fell in this section on Sunday, accompanied by hail that did some damage.

Mr. Abce died last Friday morning at 9 o'clock. He was buried in Grand Rapids.

CRANMOOR.

Tuesday afternoon witnessed the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett and their Appleton and Clintonville guests and Mrs. Lafe Brooks of Grand Rapids for an extended trip down the Wisconsin river and Fox river. Two large boats were built for the party by Mr. B. R. Clinton, that surpass anything seen about here in convenience and completeness in every detail. That the anticipated pleasure will be fully realized is the wish of their home friends.

One of the pleasantest parties of the season was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett in honor of their visiting guests Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wright of Appleton and Dr. and Mrs. Willoughby of Clintonville, who arrived Friday for a few days stay before embarking on the river trip. Mrs. Willoughby possesses elocutionary talent of rare merit and added much to the evening's pleasure by rendering several excellent selections.

Miss Maude Griffith of Grand Rapids, who formerly taught the north school, has been a visitor since Friday at the C. E. Lester home and renewing the acquaintance of Cranmoor friends. Miss Maude was among the out of town guests at the Saturday evening festivities.

Royal Nash of Grand Rapids visited his friend Roy Lester Saturday and was among the guests at Mr. Bennetts Saturday evening.

Misses Nellie Young, Nellie Fogarty and Katherine Galligan of Nekeosa were Sunday visitors of Miss Dorothy Fitch.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafe Brooks and daughters of Green Bay were in attendance at the Bennett party Saturday evening.

On Wednesday last Mrs. Cohn and Mr. Bick arrived from Wausau for their annual visit to their marsh holdings.

Miss Kittie Cahill came down from Grand Rapids Sunday and will remain some time at the Whittlesey home.

Chas. S. Whittlesey was a down passenger on the noon train Saturday for a visit at home till Monday.

Mrs. E. E. Warner, Lillian and Gilman returned from their Poyssippi visit on Friday last.

Mr. J. B. Arpin, wife and friends of Grand Rapids paid a visit to Arpin marsh Tuesday last.

Roy Lester and his guest Royal Nash returned home Tuesday from a trip to City Point.

Mrs. W. H. Fitch and Miss Caroline were shopping at Grand Rapids Friday.

Miss Marian of Mauston has been visiting her cousin Miss Myra Kruger.

Atty. J. A. Gaylor of Grand Rapids was down this way one day this week.

Harry Abrams was a caller at the Whittlesey home Friday.

C. E. Lester left for Madison on the noon train Tuesday.

H. F. Whittlesey spent Thursday last at Grand Rapids.

NEKOOSA.

The Nekoosa base ball nine went to the Deils on Sunday and played with the Portage team, the score being 18 to 0 in favor of Portage. The Nekoosa team was never so badly defeated.

Frank Gates of Wausau, who is employed in the mill, had the middle finger of his right hand taken off and the others badly bruised one day this week.

Mrs. W. T. Early and son Roy returned from Kaukauna on Monday after spending two weeks with relatives and friends.
